Brühl,2019-10-17 Pesticide usage is increasing worldwide and considered among the main factors contributing to the global decline in biodiversity This Research Topic provides an overview of the state of knowledge regarding non target effects of herbicides fungicides insecticides and rodenticides on a variety of ecosystem functions and organisms Taxa covered in the contributions include algae amphibians aquatic fungi aquatic insects bats bumblebees butterflies earthworms enchytraeids honeybees plants rodents and soil microorganisms The papers also highlight many gaps in our understanding of non target effects of pesticides and their consequences for biodiversity and functions of various ecosystems Overall it became clear that priorities for future work on pesticides and their effects should more focus on investigating or simulating realistic field situations i e multiple applications of pesticides during the growing season including their temporal and spatial interactions with fauna and flora Who's who in the South and Southwest ,1993 Books and Pamphlets, Including Serials and Contributions to Periodicals Library of Congress. Copyright Office,1957 Guide to Best Practices for Ocean Acidification Research and Data Reporting ,2011 The ocean presently takes up one fourth of the carbon dioxide emitted to the atmosphere by human activities thereby increasing ocean acidity While our understanding of the possible consequences of ocean acidification is still rudimentary both the scientific community and the society at large are increasingly concerned about the potential risks associated with ocean acidification for marine organisms and ecosystems The number of scientists involved in ocean acidification research grew rapidly over the past few years and will continue to rise with the launch of new coordinated national programmes. Students, young researchers and established scientists inexperienced with the intricacies of the seawater carbonate chemistry and perturbation experiments will enter the field and will benefit from guidelines and standards for ocean acidification research. The European Project on Ocean Acidification (EPOCA) and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) initiated the process that led after an open community review to the production of this guide.
