School of Education,2000 Retirement and Wealth Alan L. Gustman,Thomas L. Steinmeier,2001 This paper estimates reduced form retirement and wealth equations and analyzes the relationship between them Data are from the first four waves of the longitudinal Health and Retirement Study individuals born from 1931 to 1941 Single equation retirement models relate the probability of retiring to forward looking measures of changes in the values of social security and pension benefits when retirement is postponed Such simple models suggest that if the social security early retirement age were to be raised or abolished more people would retire earlier rather than later Our work analyzes the reasons for such counter intuitive predictions and discusses the need to analyze these policies in the context of a structural model of retirement and wealth To improve retirement analysis we develop the premium value a measure of the future value of pensions and social security that better reflects the accrual of benefits under defined contribution plans We also introduce a new definition of retirement to blend information on objective hours worked with subjective self reports of retirement status Our findings also explore the effects of social security incentives on partial retirement and consider the importance of partial retirement in any study relating social security to retirement behavior Journal of Forensic Economics ,2002 Social Security Reform Steven A. Social Security Report ,2009 Social Security Benefits of Immigrants and U.S. Born Alan L. Gustman,Thomas L. Steinmeier,1998 Abstract For each year of work under the Social Security System immigrants realize higher benefits than U S born even when their earnings are identical in all years the immigrant has been in the U S Two features of the social security benefit calculation are responsible the social security benefit formula transfers benefits toward those with low lifetime covered earnings and all years an immigrant spends outside the US are treated as years of zero income Immigrants with high earnings who have worked in the U S for only a 10 20 years benefit most from these procedures If instead earnings were averaged only over the years an immigrant resides in the U S and benefits prorated immigrants would receive the same return on their social security taxes as US born who have the same earnings in each year It is difficult to justify the current procedures determining benefits for immigrants on the basis of income or wealth differences between US and foreign born Among HHRS respondents mean total wealth of immigrants is 92% of the mean total wealth of US born while the mean income of immigrants exceeds the mean income of US born by 3% But income and wealth are less evenly distributed among foreign born than US born Depending on whether the appropriate period for calculating benefits is taken to be 35 or 40 years prorating would reduce the present value of benefit payments to the cohort of immigrants born from 1932 1941 91% of the HRS cohort by 7.5 billion or 15 billion respectively The 1932 1941 cohort represents 1.7% of all foreign born who are now 25 64 We also ask whether from a selfish financial viewpoint US born participants would have preferred to have immigrants from the HRS cohort included in social security The answer is yes Despite their better deal most immigrants in the HRS cohort will pay more in taxes than they will receive in benefits although just barely
