

Absolute Returns

Absolute return shows the total gain or loss on a mutual fund investment, ignoring the time taken. It's ideal for short-term (less than 1 year) analysis but doesn't show annual performance over longer periods.

The formula to calculate absolute return is,

$$\text{Absolute Return} = \frac{(\text{Current NAV} - \text{Initial NAV})}{\text{Initial NAV}} \times 100$$

For example,

Consider Investor A buying mutual fund units with a NAV of Rs. 105, and after 1 year, the NAV is Rs. 115. The absolute return on this,

$$\text{Absolute Return} = \frac{(115 - 105)}{105} \times 100 = 9.52\%$$

Barton Waring, 2006 The notion of absolute return investing is spreading like wildfire Many people believe that superior returns can be achieved by managers with strong views and little regard for benchmarks This article attempts to define absolute return investing and figure out whether it exists The conclusion is that all investment returns consist of a beta part representing the correlation of the active portfolio with one or more market benchmarks or normal portfolios and an active alpha part Thus all investing is relative return investing in which active returns are earned relative to an appropriate benchmark or mix of benchmarks
