Academic Profiling Gilda L. Ochoa, 2013-10-01 Today the achievement gap is hotly debated among pundits, politicians and educators. In particular, this conversation often focuses on the two fastest growing demographic groups in the United States: Asian Americans and Latinos. In Academic Profiling, Gilda L. Ochoa addresses this so-called gap by going directly to the source. At one California public high school where the controversy is lived every day, Ochoa turns to the students, teachers and parents to learn about the very real disparities in opportunity, status, treatment and assumptions that lead to more than just gaps in achievement. In candid and at times heart-wrenching detail, the students tell stories of encouragement and neglect on their paths to graduation. Separated by unequal middle schools and curriculum tracking, they are divided by race, class and gender. While those channeled into an International Baccalaureate Program boast about Socratic classes and stress-release sessions, students left out of such programs commonly describe uninspired teaching and inaccessible counseling. Students, unequally labeled, encounter differential policing and assumptions based on their abilities, disparities compounded by the growth in the private tutoring industry that favors the already economically privileged. Despite the entrenched inequality in today's schools, Academic Profiling finds hope in the many ways students and teachers are affirming identities, creating alternative spaces and fostering critical consciousness. When Ochoa shares the results of her research with the high school, we see the new possibilities and limits of change.

Beyond Constraint Shona N. Jackson,2024-10-11 In Beyond Constraint Shona N Jackson offers a new approach to labour and its analysis by demonstrating the fundamental relation between black and Indigenous People s sovereign free and coerced labour in the Americas Through the writings of Cedric Robinson Walter Rodney C L R James and Sylvia Wynter Jackson confronts the elision of Indigenous People s labour in the black radical tradition She argues that this elision is an effect of the structural relation of antiblackness to anti indigeneity through which native and black bodies are arranged on either side of a split between unproductive labour and productive work necessary for capital accumulation and for how we read capital in political economic critique This division between labour and work forces the radical tradition to sustain the break between black and Indigenous peoples as part of its critical strategies of liberation To address this impasse Jackson reads the tradition against the grain for openings to indigeneity and a method for recovering lost labours

Academic Culture Zbigniew Drozdowicz, 2021-05-24 The author of this book formulates a general thesis that in the academic culture since the emergence of the first universities until this very day two types of that culture have competed with each other i.e. a corporate and templar one In his remarks the author tries to highlight it through the presentation of 1 The functioning of academia in different time periods 2 The beliefs of scholars 3 The ways scholarly achievements have been evaluated 4 The legal acts for science and academia A considerable part of this study is devoted to the analysis of the Polish academic culture including the attempts of adjusting the existing standards of conducting research and educating students to the ones prevailing in the leading Western countries

In Pursuit of Knowledge Deborah Rhode, 2006-09-25 Although academics have never lacked for critics publications on the profession tend to be either popularized polemics which are engaging but misleading or scholarly analyses which are intellectually responsible but of little interest to anyone but specialists In Pursuit of Knowledge offers an alternative a unique portrait of academic life that should appeal to both experts and a general audience Drawing on a wide range of disciplines including higher education history law sociology economics and literature the book focuses on the ways in which the pursuit of status has undermined the pursuit of knowledge Deborah Rhode argues that both individual scholars and institutions in higher education are caught in an arms race of reputation The result has been to skew priorities in scholarship erode commitments to teaching compromise efforts of public intellectuals and impede effectiveness in administration The book offers several solutions to counter these pervasive problems in our research institutions Rhode makes a case for increasing accountability and realigning reward systems She argues that what is needed is a greater sense of responsibility among universities and their faculties to narrow the gap between academic ideals and practices In Pursuit of Knowledge is meticulously researched and elegantly written It is also exceptionally entertaining in its use of quotations culled from over a hundred academic novels including works by Kingsley Amis Saul Bellow David Lodge and C P Snow For example from P G Wodehouse's The Girl in Blue The Agee woman told us for three quarters of an hour how she came to write her beastly book when a simple apology was all that was required The result is a highly readable but also deeply reflective analysis of the academic profession

Academic Culture Burton R. Clark, 1980 Rethinking Academic Culture in the Information Age Maria José M. Ferreira, 2005 The integration of new technologies in higher education has provoked a strong response over the last decade not only from administrators and the public but also from academics It has re-opened basic theoretical questions about the role of universities and that of academic culture

Understanding Academic Culture and Climate Marvin W. Peterson, Melinda G. Spencer, 1990 The Politics of Academic Culture Heinz Eulau, 1998 What do political scientists do when they get together in addition to joining in learned discourse Eulau professor emeritus at Stanford University answers this question in his humorous and iconoclastic book The author draws on his many experiences as a participant observer of his academic colleagues foibles and fumbles with a few facts thrown in during the past half century

Affiliations Jeffrey R. Di Leo, 2003-01-01 It's not what you know but who you know. It's not what you do but where you do it. Underlying such facile assertions there lies at least a little truth and for academics a complex web of relationships. Academic affiliations confer value and identity on individuals, disciplines and institutions. They have a formative and formidable role in determining the status and self image of academics and institutions. The subtleties and implications of such a system in personal and professional terms are the subject of this timely and thought provoking volume. Here writers from all walks of academic life interweave personal experiences and critical insights to reveal the inner workings of affiliation in contemporary academic culture. These essays take up topics ranging from scholars' attitudes toward their affiliated institutions to publishing in academic journals, from the phenomenon of the academic star system to activism among tenured professors, from the perils of crossing disciplinary boundaries to the merits of mentoring through affiliation. Together they offer a frank firsthand view of the ways and means and the uses and abuses of affiliation in higher education today, a view that is sure to provoke discussion throughout academia.

Making the Grade Howard S. Becker, 2017-07-05 Based on three years of detailed anthropological observation, this account of undergraduate culture portrays students' academic relations to faculty and administration as one of subjection. With rare intervals in crisis moments, student life has always been dominated by grades and grade point averages. The authors of Making the Grade maintain that though it has taken different forms from time to time, the emphasis on grades has persisted in academic life. From this premise they argue that the social organization giving rise to this emphasis has remained remarkably stable throughout the century. Becker, Geer and Hughes discuss various aspects of college life and examine the degree of autonomy students have over each facet of their lives. Students negotiate with authorities the conditions of campus political and organizational life, the student government, independent student organizations and the student newspaper, and preserve substantial areas of autonomous action for themselves. Those same authorities leave them to run such aspects of their private lives as friendships and dating as they wish. But when it comes to academic matters, students are subject to the decisions of college faculties and administrators. Becker deals with this continuing lack of autonomy in student life in his new introduction. He also examines new phenomena such as the impact of grade inflation and how the world of real adult work has increasingly made professional and technical expertise, in addition to high grades, the necessary condition for success. Making the Grade continues to be an unparalleled contribution to the studies of academics, students and college life. It will be of interest to university administrators, professors, students and sociologists.

Rethinking Academic Culture in the Information Age? Maria José Ferreira, 2014-03 The use of information and communication technologies in higher education is surrounded by contradictory yet interrelated themes that suggest that education is either experiencing a revolution or approaching its own demise. Undoubtedly, technologies are becoming embedded in academic life but patterns of adoption are more complex and nuanced than polarized themes suggest. The extreme polarity of a promises and fears spectrum is unable to fully account for why this is the case neither can it be explained by economics demographics or the technology This article argues that one of the most significant variables in the deployment of and adaptation to information technologies in the university is academic culture In other words unless we consider academic culture we cannot fully capture the relationship of technologies to education
