

Documentary Research Strategy to Research Canada

Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	1. Research aims  Documentary Research aims to explore and understand the experiences of individuals and groups in a particular social context. This is achieved through the collection and analysis of documents, which are defined as any written or recorded material that provides information about a particular topic or issue. This can include a wide range of materials, from official records and government documents to personal letters and diaries. The aim of Documentary Research is to use these documents to gain a deeper understanding of the social and cultural context in which they were produced and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 2. Research design  Documentary Research is a qualitative research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. The design of a Documentary Research project will depend on the research aims and the types of documents that are available. It may involve a search for specific documents, or it may involve a more general search for documents that relate to a particular topic or issue. The design should also take into account the ethical considerations of working with documents, such as the need to ensure that the documents are properly stored and protected from loss or damage. 3. Data collection  The data collection process in Documentary Research involves the identification and location of documents that are relevant to the research aims. This can be done through a variety of methods, including searching archives, libraries, and online databases. It may also involve contacting individuals or organizations that hold documents of interest. Once the documents have been located, they should be carefully examined and transcribed or summarized in a way that allows them to be used in the analysis. 4. Data analysis  The data analysis process in Documentary Research involves the interpretation of the documents in light of the research aims and the theoretical framework that guides the research. This may involve identifying themes and patterns in the documents, as well as exploring the ways in which the documents have been used and interpreted over time. The analysis should also take into account the ethical considerations of working with documents, such as the need to ensure that the documents are properly stored and protected from loss or damage. 5. Research findings  The research findings in Documentary Research are the results of the analysis of the documents. These findings should be presented in a clear and concise way, and they should be supported by evidence from the documents. The findings should also be discussed in the context of the research aims and the theoretical framework that guides the research. This may involve comparing the findings to existing research on the topic, as well as exploring the implications of the findings for future research.
