When energized, the ASD relay on SBEC, which supplies battery voltage to the fuel injection solenoids and the heating element in each glow plug, provides power to operate the injectors, the coil generator field, O2 sensor heaters, flood valves, and alternators, engine charge solenoids, EGR solenoids (if equipped), and waste solenoids (if equipped) and NALD solenoids (if equipped).

For the SBEC and NALD, the ASD relay also provides power directly to the fuel solenoid for the PCM. The PCM can shut off the fuel from the injectors by grounding the coil and solenoid. The ASD relay provides power to the DTC, PCM, and ASD and also provides an engine speed signal to a predictive engine speed controller. The ASD relay can also be energized when the engine has turned off to provide power to the glow plug heater coil, if vehicle is equipped.

When marginal, the AGC relies on dispatchable generators to provide power to operate the transmission system. The dispatchable generators include coal, gas, oil, nuclear, and hydroelectric. The AGC also dispatches non-dispatchable generators, such as wind, solar, and biomass. The AGC also dispatches storage devices, such as pumped storage, to provide power when needed. The AGC also dispatches demand response programs to reduce load when needed. The AGC also dispatches renewable energy sources, such as wind, solar, and biomass, to provide power when needed. The AGC also dispatches storage devices, such as pumped storage, to provide power when needed. The AGC also dispatches demand response programs to reduce load when needed.

Typical engine speeds are 500-1000 RPM. The AND relay can also be engaged when the engine has been turned off to prevent the engine from starting, if vehicle is equipped with a theft-deterrent system.

On vehicles, the PCM energizes the ASD relay during an O2 sensor heater test. This test is performed only after the engine has been shut off for MISC vehicles. On HGC vehicles it checks the O2 heater upon vehicle start. The PCM will operate internally to perform several checks, including monitoring the O2 sensor heaters.

The PCM sends approximately 5 volts to the Hall-effect sensor. This voltage is required to operate the Hall-effect chip and the electronics inside the sensor.
