And Infrastructure Internet Governance Information Technology:

The Turn to Infrastructure in Internet Governance Francesca Musiani, Derrick L. Cogburn, Laura DeNardis, Nanette S. Levinson, 2016-03-02 This edited volume brings together experts from around the world to provide coverage and analysis of infrastructure's role in Internet governance both now and in the future. Never in history have conflicts over Internet governance attracted such widespread attention. High profile controversies include the disclosures about NSA surveillance by intelligence analyst Edward Snowden, controversy over a decision by the US government to relinquish its historic oversight of Internet names and numbers, and countless cybersecurity breaches involving unauthorized access to Internet users' personal data. Much of the Internet governance ecosystem, both technical architecture and coordinating institutions, is behind the scenes but increasingly carries significant public interest implications. An area once concealed in institutional and technological complexity is now rightly bracketed among other shared global issues such as environmental protection and human rights that have considerable global implications but are simply incongruous with national borders. This transformation into an era of global governance by Internet infrastructure presents a moment of opportunity for scholars to bring these politicized infrastructures to the foreground.

The Public Core of the Internet Dennis Broeders, 2025-10-01 The growth and health of our digital economies and societies depend on the core protocols and infrastructure of the Internet. This technical and logical substructure of our digital existence is now in need of protection against unwarranted interference in order to sustain the growth and the integrity of the global Internet. The Internet's key protocols and infrastructure can be considered a global public good that provides benefits to everyone in the world. Countering the growing state interference with this public core of the Internet requires a new international agenda for Internet governance that departs from the notion of a global public good. Core ingredients of this strategy are: To establish and disseminate an international norm stipulating that the Internet's public core, its main protocols and infrastructure, should be considered a neutral zone safeguarded against unwarranted intervention by governments; To advocate efforts to clearly differentiate at the national and international level between Internet security and security of the Internet infrastructure; and national security and security through the Internet; To broaden the arena for cyber diplomacy to include new coalitions of states, including the so-called swing states and private companies, including the large Internet companies as well as Internet intermediaries such as Internet Service Providers.
