William Day, 2017-07-05 The modern vision of the world as one dominated by one or more superpowers begs the question of how best to understand the world system that existed before the rise of the first modern powers Janet Abu Lughod's solution to this problem in this highly influential work is that Before European Hegemony a predominantly insular agrarian world was dominated by groups of mercantile city states that traded with one another on equal terms across a series of interlocking areas of influence In this reading of history China and Japan the kingdoms of India Muslim caliphates the Byzantine Empire and European maritime republics alike enjoyed no absolute dominance over their neighbours and commercial partners and the egalitarian international trading network that they built endured until European advances in weaponry and ship types introduced radical instability to the system Abu Lughod's portrait of a more balanced world is a masterpiece of synthesis driven by one highly creative idea her world system of interlocking spheres of influence quite literally connected masses of evidence together in new ways A triumph of fine critical thinking Before European Hegemony William R. Day, 2017-07-05 In the century before the Black Death swept across the world economic relations flourished between Europe the Middle East and Asia three interdependent regions interacting on essentially equal terms Before European Hegemony uses a wide ranging geographical analysis to examine the collapse of this thriving global economy built around interlocking sub systems with the major world cities and towns playing a crucial role As economic activity spread across borders so did the Black Death In the East its catastrophic impact was exacerbated by the disintegration of the Mongol Empire and the collapse of the Asia wide trading system which enabled the west to rise from the ruins and dominate the modern capitalist world system Book jacket An Analysis of Janet L.
