II. Taxation Without Representation:

Definition:

- "Taxation without representation" refers to the situations in which Americans colonists were subjected to taxes by the British government without having a local representative in the British Parliament to advocate for their interests. This government taxation was one of the central issues leading to the American Revolution.

Example:

- Stamp Act (1765): This law imposed taxes on paper products, including newspapers, legal documents, and playing cards, without any colonial representation.

- Townshend Acts (1767): A series of taxes on goods like glass, lead, tea, and paint, imposed by Parliament, again without colonial representation.

- Tea Act (1773): While this act was designed to aid the British East India Company, it still imposed a tax on tea, leading to the Boston Tea Party as a protest.

Significance:

- The colonists experienced the true colonial complaint about British government and became a rallying cry for resistance. The lack of representation in Parliament was not the only reason that affected them, the King's well-known characteristics and even apathy were necessary as well. This injustice was caused to the colonists' desire for independence and contributed directly to the American Revolution.

III. Loyalists vs. Patriots:

Definition:

- Loyalists were Americans colonists who remained loyal to the British Crown during the American Revolutionary War, while Patriots were those who supported independence from Britain. The conflict between these two groups represented a significant ideological and political divide within the colonies.

Example:

- Loyalists: Many Loyalists were wealthier colonists, government officials, Anglican clergymen, and men from the New England the British Crown, as represented the British royal and monarchial interests. Some favored the crown and neutrality of a rebellion. Prominent Loyalists included Joseph Chaloner and William Franklin (the son of Benjamin Franklin).

- Patriots: Patriots were more likely to come from the lower and middle classes, less wealthy families, the大陸people, and intellectuals. They believed that independence was necessary for the protection of colonists' rights and liberties. Prominent Patriots included figures like George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Samuel Adams.
