Aleks Final Exam:

Productivity in Higher Education Caroline M. Hoxby, Kevin Stange, 2020-01-10 How do the benefits of higher education compare with its costs and how does this comparison vary across individuals and institutions? These questions are fundamental to quantifying the productivity of the education sector. The studies in Productivity in Higher Education use rich and novel administrative data, modern econometric methods and careful institutional analysis to explore productivity issues. The authors examine the returns to undergraduate education, differences in costs by major, the productivity of for-profit schools, the productivity of various types of faculty and of outcomes, the effects of online education on the higher education market and the ways in which the productivity of different institutions responds to market forces. The analyses recognize five key challenges to assessing productivity in higher education: the potential for multiple student outcomes in terms of skills, earnings, invention and employment; the fact that colleges and universities are multiproduct firms that conduct varied activities across many domains; the fact that students select which school to attend based in part on their aptitude; the difficulty of attributing outcomes to individual institutions when students attend more than one; and the possibility that some of the benefits of higher education may arise from the system as a whole rather than from a single institution. The findings and the approaches illustrated can facilitate decision making processes in higher education.

Learning, Design, and Technology J. Michael Spector, Barbara B. Lockee, Marcus D. Childress, 2023-10-14 The multiple related fields encompassed by this Major Reference Work represent a convergence of issues and topics germane to the rapidly changing segments of knowledge and practice in educational communications and technology at all levels and around the globe. There is no other comparable work that is designed not only to gather vital current and evolving information and understandings in these knowledge segments but also to be updated on a continuing basis in order to keep pace with the rapid changes taking place in the relevant fields. The Handbook is composed of substantive 5 000 to 15 000 words peer-reviewed entries that examine and explicate seminal facets of learning theory research and practice. It provides a broad range of relevant topics including significant developments as well as innovative uses of technology that promote learning performance and instruction. This work is aimed at researchers, designers, developers, instructors and other professional practitioners.

More than a Moment Steven D. Krause, 2020-01-02 As recently as 2012 massive open online courses (MOOCs) looked poised to revolutionize higher education but in just a few years their flaws and problems have made them into a less relevant model. In More than a Moment, Steven D. Krause explores MOOCs and their continuing impact on distance learning in higher education, putting them in the context of technical innovations that have come before and those that will be part of the educational future. Krause writes about his own experiences as a participant in several MOOCs and the experiences of faculty who developed and taught MOOCs. Contrary to many early claims from educational entrepreneurs, they were never entirely new and MOOCs and their aftermath are still at the heart of the tensions between nonprofit universities and for-profit entities.

particularly online program management firms in delivering distance education While MOOCs are no longer a threat to education in the United States they are part of the ongoing corporatization of education and remain part of conversations about experienced based credit corporate training and open education Presenting historical student teacher and administrative perspectives More than a Moment is a well rounded treatment that will be of interest to academics and entrepreneurs interested in distance education online pedagogy online program management and public private partnerships in higher education

The Power of Technology for Learning Noah P. Barsky, Mike Clements, Jakob Ravn, Kelly Smith, 2008-09-17 In today's dynamic global business environment where knowledge is a main asset and learning becomes the most important process Business Education needs to employ the right practices to develop future leaders Businesses require graduates that become true experts But can business schools indeed create learning experiences that address the needs of the global marketplace Can they teach students to build learning organizations The articles in this volume detail successful approaches developed by business educators and researchers The approaches have been implemented to solve real problems and to provide students with the ethical and analytical abilities they will need to both compete and contribute to the betterment of others The thematic part of this volume focuses on the potential of interactive on line activities to promote business and economics education They demonstrate the benefits that learning technologies can bring and show how to overcome potential problem issues

Building Learning Experiences in a Changing World Piet Van den Bossche, Wim H. Gijselaers, Richard G. Milter, 2011-04-14 Advances in Business Education Training is a Book Series to foster advancement in the field of Business Education and Training It serves as an international forum for scholarly and state of the art research and development into all aspects of Business Education and Training This new volume deals with several aspects of the challenge to design learning in and for a changing world The first part concerns program development How to build curricula that are future proof Principles to innovate our curricula are identified It answers the question how we can incorporate the need for change in our thinking about curriculum development and identify the necessary elements to incorporate in our curricula The second part focuses on the increasing diversity of students and employees within our schools and organizations in terms of culture language and perception of ability gifts and talents This offers a range of opportunities but at the same time can possibly jeopardize some processes that are taken for granted Chapters in this part analyze the processes that play a crucial role in dealing with this diversity and identify educational practices that can help to harvest the potential that lies within this diversity The third part of this book digs further into the possibilities that are opened up by the implementation of ICT support in our learning environments E learning provides tools to adapt these environments to the needs of an increasingly diverse student population In the last part we focus specifically on the workplace and how learning can be designed in such a way that employees are equipped for a shifting workplace On the one hand it is looked how training can affect performance in the workplace Does learning transfer to the work environment On the other hand it is questioned how one can design affordances to trigger learning in the workplace Knowledge Spaces Jean-Claude Falmagne, Dietrich Albert, Christopher Doble, David Eppstein, Xiangen Hu, 2013-06-20 The book describes up to date applications and relevant theoretical results These applications come from various places but the most important one numerically speaking is the internet based educational system ALEKS The ALEKS system is bilingual English Spanish and covers all of mathematics from third grade to the end of high school and chemistry It is also widely used in higher education because US students are often poorly prepared when they reach the university level The chapter by Taagepera and Arasasingham deals with the application of knowledge spaces independent of ALEKS to the teaching of college chemistry The four chapters by Albert and his collaborators strive to give cognitive interpretations to the combinatoric structures obtained and used by the ALEKS system The contribution by Eppstein is technical and develops means of searching the knowledge structure efficiently
