

Social Psychology

Attitude Formation

- attitudes are defined as enduring systems of beliefs that can be examined on three different levels:
  - cognitive (how we think or reason through an attitude)
  - emotional (how we feel regarding an attitude)
  - behavioral (how we act on an attitude)

Origins of Attitudes

- research has indicated there are several ways in which we acquire attitudes
- one of our earliest agents of attitude formation are our parents, later followed by our peers and the media
- four major sources of attitude formation are:
  - classical conditioning: associating behaviors and attitudes as "good" or "bad" (i.e. it's good to tell the truth, it's bad to steal)
  - operant conditioning: being rewarded or punished for behavior and attitudes (i.e. being praised for telling the truth or being punished for stealing something)
  - cognitive appraisals: weighing logical arguments in determining your attitude
  - observational learning: learning attitudes through peer behavior and the media

Attitudes and Persuasion

- mere exposure effect—the more someone is exposed to an attitude, the more that person will like it (e.g. buying the name brand item because you've seen lots of commercials for it)
- central route persuasion—deeply processing a message's content (e.g. why do you like this particular product)
- peripheral route persuasion—deals with other aspects rather than the content (e.g. liking the spokesperson for a product)

Persuasion

- persuasion is an attempt to change a person's attitudes
- research has indicated there are several key components that make messages more persuasive: the persuasive communicator and the persuaded audience.

Persuasive Message

- the persuasive message has several variables:
  - familiarity: messages are more persuasive if we are familiar with the product or information
  - repetition: the more a message is repeated (especially if it is complex), the more persuasive it is
  - two-sided arguments: both sides to an argument are presented
  - emotional appeals: commercials, especially, are more persuasive if they appeal to the emotions
  - arguments that run counter to the communicator's interests: messages that seem to go against the interests of the person speaking tend to be more persuasive

Persuasive Communicator

- the persuasive communicators tends to:
  - show expertise
  - be trustworthy
  - be attractive
  - be similar to the audience
  - come from health professions
- research has indicated that when food and music are added to messages, their persuasiveness increases.

Attitudes and Attitude Change William D. Crano, Radmila Prislin, 2011-07-21 This volume assembles a distinguished group of international scholars whose chapters on classic and emerging issues in research on attitudes provide an excellent introduction for advanced undergraduates and graduate students. The book's chapters cover all of the most critical features of attitude measurement, attitude development and attitude change. Implicit and explicit approaches to measurement and conceptualization are featured throughout making this one of the most up to date treatments of attitude theory and research currently available. The comprehensive coverage of the central topics in this important field provides a useful text in advanced courses on persuasion or attitude change.

Attitude Formation and Change James Dermot Halloran, 1976-03-30 This psychological study explores the nature and formation of attitudes in an individual and how attitudes are changed by outside forces.

The Psychology of Attitudes and Attitude Change Joseph P. Forgas, Joel Cooper, William D. Crano, 2011-01-07 Attitudes are central to understanding human beings' unique ability to create elaborate predispositions and evaluations based on their social experiences. This volume reviews cutting edge research on attitudes by leading scholars and is essential reading for social psychologists and practitioners in clinical, counseling, organizational, marketing, forensic and developmental psychology.

Attitudes and Attitude Change Gerd Bohner, Michaela Wanke, 2014-03-18 Attitudes cognitive representations of our evaluation of ourselves, other people, things, actions, events, ideas, and attitude change have been a central concern in social psychology since the discipline began. People can and do have attitudes on an infinite range of things, but what are attitudes, how do we form them, and how can they be modified? This book provides the student with a comprehensive and accessible introduction to the basic issues in the psychological study of attitudes. Drawing on research from Europe and the USA, it presents up to date coverage of the key issues that will be encountered in this area, including attitude formation and change, functions of attitudes, attitude measurement, attitudes as temporary constructs, persuasion processes and prediction of behaviour from attitudes.

Attitude Formation and Attitude Change Lorena Jeanne Tinker, 1991

Personality & Social Change Theodore Mead, Newcomb, 1943

The Science of Attitudes Joel Cooper, Shane Blackman, Kyle Keller, 2015-09-16 The Science of Attitudes is the first book to integrate classic and modern research in the field of attitudes at a scholarly level. Designed primarily for advanced undergraduates and graduate students, the presentation of research will also be useful for current scholars in all disciplines who are interested in how attitudes are formed and changed. The treatment of attitudes is both thorough and unique, taking a historical approach while simultaneously highlighting contemporary views and controversies. The book traces attitudes research from the inception of scientific study following World War II to the issues and methods of research that are prominent features of today's research. Researchers in the field of attitudes will be particularly interested in classic and modern research on the organization, structure, strength and function of attitudes. Researchers in the field of persuasion will be particularly interested in work on attitude change, focusing on propositional and associative learning metacognition and dynamic theories of dissonance balance and reactance The book is designed to present the integration of the properties of the attitude with the dynamic considerations of attitude change The Science of Attitudes is also the first book on attitudes to devote entire chapters to work on implicit measurements resistance to persuasion and social neuroscience Attitudes and Persuasion Philip Erwin, 2014-02-24 Attitudes and Persuasion provides an up to date overview of the crucial role that attitudes play in our everyday lives and how our thoughts and behaviour are influenced The nature function and origins of attitudes are examined and a review of how they can be measured is given The book addresses complex questions such as whether we always behave in accordance with our attitudes and what factors may influence us to change them Attitude and Attitude Change Georgian Federation of Psychologists Academic Team, The concept of attitude a fundamental construct in social psychology has been a subject of extensive research and discussion for decades Attitudes defined as learned global evaluations that influence thought and action play a crucial role in shaping human behavior and decision making processes Higbee Wells 1972 Recent developments in the field have shed light on the complex nature of attitudes challenging the traditional unidimensional view and exploring the multifaceted aspects of attitude strength One of the key reasons for the academic interest in attitudes is their ability to predict and understand human behavior As attitudes become more favorable towards an object individuals are more likely to engage with and utilize that object Rucker 2020 However the strength of an attitude independent of its valence is equally important in determining its influence on thought and behavior Stronger attitudes those that are more persistent over time resistant to change and influential on cognition and behavior have been the focus of growing research Eaton et al 2008 Empirical studies have provided insights into the structure and function of attitude strength Attitudes can vary widely in their ability to guide perception shape thoughts and inspire action congruent behaviors Some attitudes profoundly influence our understanding of the world and prompt us to act in accordance with our evaluations while others exert little impact on our thoughts and actions fluctuating over time and easily susceptible to persuasive appeals Eaton et al 2008 The multidimensional nature of attitudes has also been a topic of interest in the field of social psychology Recent research has challenged the traditional unidimensional view of attitudes suggesting that they may possess a more complex structure encompassing cognitive affective and behavioral components This multidimensional perspective has important implications for understanding the mechanisms underlying attitude change and the role of affect in persuasion Attitude Formation and Change James D.
