An Address Pronounced Before the House of Convocation of Trinity College (Classic Reprint) John Williams, 2015-07-08

Excerpt from An Address Pronounced Before the House of Convocation of Trinity College Mr Dean and Gentlemen of Convocation It seems proper that the first words of him who on this occasion is honoured in addressing you should be those of congratulation There has been as we trust revived among us something of the old and true principle of the University Not indeed in its ancient form nor in precisely the ancient mode of its expression For it may and often does chance that a principle shall express itself in diverse outward forms in different ages while yet in itself it remains unchanged Indeed no external organisations or forms within which principles are enshrined save only those which being of divine appointment are adapted to every age and not to be changed by man can be expected to remain precisely the same generation after generation and age after age For they exist in a world whose social and intellectual relations are continually changing and by those very changes demanding corresponding changes in those external modes by which unchanging principles are brought to bear and do their work whether on individuals or on masses of our race About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Address Pronounced Before the House of Convocation J. M. Wainwright, 2015-07-08 Excerpt from An Address

Pronounced Before the House of Convocation Of Trinity College Hartford August 4th 1847 Mr Dean and Gentlemen of the House of Convocation The statute of the Corporation of Trinity College under the authority of which we are now met together eminently liberal and wise in its inception appears to me already to be giving proof of its beneficial operation Heretofore the literary festival we are about to celebrate has attracted us from our distant homes and various pursuits to testify our respect for this seminary of learning and our sympathy with the young brethren who are to receive its honors and at the same time to enjoy amongst ourselves the pleasures of social intercourse But I feel confident that I speak your sentiments when I say that we are now drawn hither by an additional and even a higher motive and that we are prepared to manifest a much warmer love for Trinity College and a far deeper interest in its welfare than we have ever felt before in consequence of the trust with which we have been honored and in view of the duty which that trust calls upon us to discharge As the House of Convocation we have a distinct being in connexion with the College and are recognized as having a constituent department in the management of its concerns About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses
