Rethinking College Student Retention John M. Braxton, William R. Doyle, Harold V. Hartley, III, Amy S. Hirschy, Willis A. Jones, Michael K. McLendon, 2013-10-21 Drawing on studies funded by the Lumina Foundation the nation's largest private foundation focused solely on increasing Americans success in higher education the authors revise current theories of college student departure including Tinto's making the important distinction between residential and commuter colleges and universities and thereby taking into account the role of the external environment and the characteristics of social communities in student departure and retention A unique feature of the authors approach is that they also consider the role that the various characteristics of different states play in degree completion and first year persistence First year college student retention and degree completion is a multi layered multi dimensional problem and the book's recommendations for state and institutional level policy and practice will help policy makers and planners at all levels as well as anyone concerned with institutional retention rates and helping students reach their maximum potential for success understand the complexities of the issue and develop policies and initiatives to increase student persistence

Barrows, Nathaniel Hartshorne, Stephen F. Klein, John L. D. Clark, 1981 Freshmen and seniors in four year colleges and students in two year institutions were surveyed nationally in 1980 to determine their understanding of the world and world issues The survey which was based on a sample of about 3 000 undergraduates at 185 institutions included a test of global understanding and three questionnaires on students backgrounds and interests their foreign language backgrounds and proficiency and their attitudes toward foreign nations and world issues The performance of the students on the test revealed a considerable lack of knowledge of topics the test developers felt were important All three groups did well on questions concerned with population physical geography and arts and culture Their weakest performance was on questions having to do with energy and religion Significantly many students were uninformed about issues that have been widely reported and discussed in the news media Even those students who were above average scorers had serious misconceptions about many key world issues and facts including the causes of inadequate nutrition and whether the comparative world membership of Islam predominates or has a significant minority About 90 percent of the seniors reported in the language questionnaire that they had learned or studied a foreign language but relatively few felt that they could put their language education to much use The development and content of the questions in the test and the questionnaires as well as results and interpretation are covered SW The Survey of American College Students ,2009 This report presents approximately 125 tables of data exploring how full time college students in the United States view and use and evaluate their college library s information literacy training The data in the report is based on a representative sample of more than 400 full time college students in the United States Data is broken out by 16 criteria including gender grade point average major field of study income level of students type and size of college and mean SAT acceptance score of colleges among other variables The report presents data on the percentage of students who have received information literacy training how they evaluate the effectiveness of that training how they perceive their need for additional training whether they believe that an information literacy course should be required if they have ever used online tutorials provided by the library and how they evaluate their own information literacy skills Just a few of the report s many findings are that More than 67% of the students in the sample say that they have received instruction on how to use their college s library Older students are much more likely than younger ones to say that they have not received library or information literacy instruction Nearly 82% of students at colleges with a mean SAT acceptance score of greater than 1950 say that they have received library or information literacy instruction Most students find library instruction helpful About 18 5% of students found the instruction that they received useless or largely useless while 31 72% considered it somewhat helpful and close to half considered it helpful or very helpful
