Chapter 1: The American Government

What is the purpose of the American government? The purpose of the American government is to protect the rights of its citizens and to provide for the common good. The government is made up of three branches: the executive branch, the legislative branch, and the judicial branch. Each branch has its own responsibilities and powers. The executive branch is headed by the President and is responsible for enforcing the laws. The legislative branch is made up of Congress and is responsible for making the laws. The judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court and is responsible for interpreting the laws.

The American government is a democracy. This means that the people have the right to elect their representatives to the government. The government is also responsible for protecting the rights of all citizens, regardless of their race, religion, or social status.

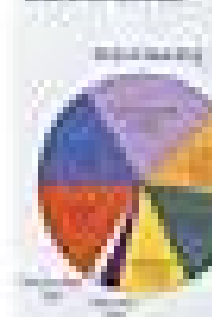

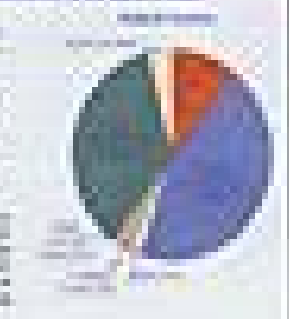

The American government is a federal system. This means that the government is divided into different levels: the national government, the state governments, and the local governments. Each level has its own responsibilities and powers. The national government is responsible for the entire country, while the state and local governments are responsible for their own areas.
