Ambassadors (Classic Reprint) Henry James, 2015-07-19 Excerpt from The Ambassadors Strether's first question when he reached the hotel was about his friend yet on his learning that Waymarsh was apparently not to arrive till evening he was not wholly disconcerted A telegram from him bespeaking a room only if not noisy with the answer paid was produced for the inquirer at the office so that the understanding that they should meet at Chester rather than at Liverpool remained to that extent sound The same secret principle however that had prompted Strether not absolutely to desire Waymarsh's presence at the dock that had led him thus to postpone for a few hours his enjoyment of it now operated to make him feel that he could still wait without disappointment They would dine together at the worst and with all respect to dear old Waymarsh if not even for that matter to himself there was little fear that in the sequel they should not see enough of each other The principle I have just mentioned as operating had been with the most newly disembarked of the two men wholly instinctive the fruit of a sharp sense that delightful as it would be to find himself looking after so much separation into his comrade's face his business would be a trifle bungled should he simply arrange that this countenance should present itself to the nearing steamer as the first note for him of Europe Mixed with everything was the apprehension already on Strether's part that he would at best throughout prove the note of Europe in quite a sufficient degree About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
