11. What is the primary purpose of the following statement?

Principles in the context of the implementation of management systems within the project. It is the experience of the project team that the principles of management systems are well suited to the needs of the project, starting with the implementation. However, differences between the management systems used in the project and the management systems used in the organization can lead to difficulties in the implementation of management systems. The project team should be aware of these differences and take steps to address them. The project team should also be aware of the potential risks associated with the implementation of management systems and take steps to mitigate them.

Although differences between individual and collective action between countries are significant, the underlying mechanisms seem to be quite similar. However, increasing the communication and taking action seems most problematical for the countries with the lowest scores. This indicates that the communication channels available for these countries are rather limited, and communication in other areas is, unfortunately, relatively stagnating. The underlying problem seems to be that the budget available for these countries is likely to be limited, resulting in low investment in public infrastructure and services.
