Africas Power Infrastructure Investment Integration Efficiency Directions In Development:

Directions in Development : Africa's Power Infrastructure : Investment, Integration, Efficiency Anton A. Eberhard,2011 Africa's Power Infrastructure Orvika Rosnes,Maria Shkaratan,2011 Africa s Power Infrastructure Investment Integration Efficiency is based on the most extensive data collection exercise ever undertaken on infrastructure in Africa the Africa Country Infrastructure Country Diagnostic AICD Data from this study have provided new insights on the extent of a power crisis in the region characterized by insufficient capacity low electricity connection rates high costs and poor reliability and on what can be done about it The continent faces an annual power sector financing gap of about 21 billion with much of the existing spending channeled to maintain and operate high cost power systems leaving little for the huge investments needed to provide a long term solution Meanwhile the power crisis is taking a heavy toll on economic growth and productivity This book asserts that the current impediments to economic growth and development need to be tackled through policies and investment strategies that renew efforts to reform state owned utilities build on the lessons of private participation in infrastructure projects retarget electrification strategies expand regional power trade and mobilize new funding resources Further development of regional power trade would allow Africa to harness larger scale and more cost effective energy sources reducing energy system costs by US 2 billion and carbon dioxide emissions by 70 million tons annually But reaping the promise of regional trade depends on a handful of major exporting countries raising the large volumes of finance needed to develop generation capacity for export it also requires a large number of importing countries to muster the requisite political will With increased utility efficiency and regional power trade in play power costs would fall and full cost recovery tariffs could become affordable in much of Africa This will make utilities more creditworthy and help sustain the flow of external finance to the sector which is essential to close the huge financing gap Energy Transitions and the Future of the African Energy Sector Victoria R. Nalule,2020-10-12 This book explores current developments in the African energy sector and highlights how these are likely to be affected by the ongoing global efforts to transition to a low carbon economy It analyses the legal regulatory and policy frameworks at the national and regional level as they relate to Energy transition in Africa and discusses how regionalism is increasingly utilized to tackle energy access and climate change challenges Using case studies from across the continent several key thematic issues including gender justice social license to operate local content and conflict of energy laws are covered in detail The authors also uniquely examine the progressive nature of global energy use and introduce the new concept of Energy Progression This book will be an invaluable reference for researchers and policymakers looking for a comprehensive overview of the field Ending Africa's Energy Deficit and the Law Yinka Omorogbe,Ada Ordor,2018-02-09 With the inclusion of access to energy in the sustainable development goals the role of energy to human existence was finally recognized Yet in Africa this achievement is far from realized Omorogbe and Ordor bring together experts in their fields to ask what is stalling progress examining problems from institutions catering to vested interests at the continent's expense to a need to develop vigorous financial and fiscal frameworks. The ramifications and complications of energy law are labyrinthine; this volume discusses how energy deficits can burden disabled people, women and children in excess of their more fortunate counterparts as well as considering environmental issues including the delicate balance between the necessity of water for drinking and cleaning and the use of water in industrial processes. A pivotal work of scholarship, the book poses pressing questions for energy law and international human rights.

Le potentiel transformateur de l'industrie minière en Afrique Sudeshna Ghosh Banerjee, Zayra Romo, Gary McMahon, Perrine Toledano, Peter Robinson, Inés Pérez Arroyo, 2015-02-17 Africa needs power power to enhance the welfare of its people and expand its economies. But Sub-Saharan Africa's power sector has the lowest generation capacity in the world. Two thirds of the regional population remains without electricity and even those with access consume the least among the world's regions. Businesses say unreliable electricity is a major hurdle. Meanwhile vast energy resources remain untapped. One possible solution is to leverage the mining industry's substantial need for power as an anchor for energy infrastructure development. The Power of the Mine: A Transformative Opportunity for Sub-Saharan Africa is the first study to systematically analyze both the potential and the challenges of power mining integration. The findings show that industry demand for electricity can be a game changer. Mining operations often devote a quarter or more of operating costs to electricity. This consistent high volume demand can spur development of national power systems thus expanding electrification for the populace. As a result citizens can also benefit from safe adequate access to electricity. Countries benefit from larger exports and tax revenues, more business and job opportunities and higher GDP. Utilities benefit from having creditworthy mining partners as a core source of revenue that attracts investment. And mines benefit from the significant cost reductions a stable power grid provides. The Power of the Mine will be of interest to policymakers, researchers and business analysts engaged in energy infrastructure development.

From the Bottom Up Bernard Tenenbaum, Chris Greacen, Tilak Siyambalapitiya, James Knuckles, 2014-01-23 This report describes the four basic types of on and off grid small power producers emerging in Africa and highlights the regulatory and policy questions that must be answered by electricity regulators, rural energy agencies and ministries to promote commercially sustainable investments by private operators and community organizations.

Handbook on Electricity Markets Glachant, Jean-Michel, Joskow, Paul L., Pollitt, Michael G., 2021-11-12 With twenty two chapters written by leading international experts, this volume represents the most detailed and comprehensive Handbook on electricity markets ever published.

Public-Private Partnerships in Sub-Saharan Africa James Leigland, 2020-04-29 Expectations are high regarding the potential benefits of public private partnerships (PPPs) for infrastructure development in low income countries. The development community led by the G20, the United Nations and others expects these partnerships between governments and private companies in infrastructure service provision to aid transformational mega projects as well as efforts to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals. Yet PPPs have been widely used only since the 1990s and discussion of their efficacy is still dominated by best practice guidance academic studies that focus on developed countries or ideological criticism Meanwhile practitioners have quietly accumulated a large body of empirical evidence on the actual performance of PPPs The purpose of this book is to summarize and consolidate what this critical mass of evidence based research indicates about PPPs in low income countries and thereby develop a more realistic perspective on the practical value of these mechanisms With a primary focus on Sub Saharan Africa though drawing on critical insights from other regions it demonstrates that the benefits of such partnerships will only be realised if expectations remain modest and projects are subject to transparent evaluation and competition Africa's Power Infrastructure Orvika Rosnes, Maria Shkaratan, Haakon Vennemo, 2011 Africa's chronic power problems have escalated in recent years into a crisis affecting 30 countries taking a heavy toll on economic growth and productivity The region has inadequate generation capacity limited electrification low power consumption unreliable services and high costs It also faces a power sector financing gap on the order of 21 billion a year It spends only about a quarter of what it needs to spend on power much of this on operating expenditure required to run the continent's high cost power systems leaving little for the huge investments needed to provide a long term solution Further development of regional power trade would allow Africa to harness larger scale more cost effective energy sources reducing energy system costs by 2 billion a year and saving 70 million tons of carbon emissions annually Economic returns to investments in cross border transmission are particularly high But reaping the promise of regional trade depends on a handful of major exporting countries raising the large volumes of finance needed to develop generation capacity for export It would also require political will in a large number of importing countries that could potentially meet more than half their power demand through trade Power sector inefficiencies are high deterring investment in new capacity and electrification There are three types of sector inefficiencies First there are utility inefficiencies which include system losses under collection of revenue and over manning These result in a major waste of resources adding up to 4.40 billion a year Under collection is the largest component of utility inefficiencies amounting to 1.73 billion following by system losses at 1.48 billion and by over manning at 1.15 billion The second type of sector inefficiency is under pricing of power By setting tariffs below the levels needed to cover the actual costs SSA countries forego revenues of 3.62 billion a year The third type of inefficiency is poor budget execution Only 66% of the capital budgets allocated to power are actually spent with about 258 million in public investment earmarked for the power sector being diverted elsewhere in the budget Full cost recovery tariffs would already be affordable in countries with efficient large scale hydro or coal based systems but not in those relying on small scale oil based plants Once regional power trade comes into play generation costs will fall and full cost recovery tariffs could be affordable in much of Africa One of the key policy challenges is to strengthen sector planning capabilities too often overlooked in today's hybrid markets A serious recommitment to reforming state owned enterprises should emphasize improvements in corporate governance more than purely technical fixes Improving cost recovery is essential for sustaining investments in electrification and regional power generation projects Closing the huge financing gap will require improving the creditworthiness of utilities and sustaining the recent upswing in external finance to the sector This book is based on extensive data collection undertaken between 2006 and 2008 by the Africa Country Infrastructure Country Diagnostic an initiative of the Infrastructure Consortium for Africa delegated to the World Bank under the guidance of the African Union African Development Bank and other multi lateral and bilateral development institutions

Resources in Education ,1997 Library & Information Science Abstracts ,1999 Independent Power Projects in Sub-Saharan Africa Anton Eberhard,Katharine Gratwick,Elvira Morella,Pedro Antmann,2016-04-18 Inadequate electricity services pose a major impediment to reducing extreme poverty and boosting shared prosperity in Sub Saharan Africa Simply put Africa does not have enough power Despite the abundant low carbon and low cost energy resources available to Sub Saharan Africa the region s entire installed electricity capacity at a little over 80 GW is equivalent to that of the Republic of Korea Looking ahead Sub Saharan Africa will need to ramp up its power generation capacity substantially The investment needed to meet this goal largely exceeds African countries already stretched public finances Increasing private investment is critical to help expand and improve electricity supply Historically most private sector finance has been channeled through privately financed independent power projects IPP supported by nonrecourse or limited recourse loans with long term power purchase agreements with the state utility or another off taker Between 1990 and 2014 IPPs have spread across Sub Saharan Africa and are now present in 17 countries Currently there are 125 IPPs with an overall installed capacity of 10 7 GW and investments of 24 6 billion However private investment could be much greater and less concentrated South Africa alone accounts for 67 IPPs 4 3 GW of capacity and 14 4 billion of investments the remaining projects are concentrated in a handful of countries The objective of this study is to evaluate the experience of IPPs and identify lessons that can help African countries attract more and better private investment At the core of this analysis is a reflection on whether IPPs have in fact benefited Sub Saharan Africa and how they might be improved The analysis is based primarily on in depth case studies carried out in five countries including Kenya Nigeria South Africa Tanzania and Uganda which not only have the most numerous but also among the most extensive experience with IPPs Energy in Africa Manfred Hafner,Simone Tagliapietra,Lucia de Strasser,2018-08-06 This open access book presents a picture of the current energy challenges on the African continent and the Sub Saharan region in particular and proposes pathways to an accelerated energy transition Starting with an analysis of the status quo and the outlook for Africa s energy demand and energy access it provides an account of the available resources including hydrocarbons and renewable energy resources which are playing an increasingly crucial role It then moves on to analyze the level of investment required to scale up Africa s energy systems shedding light on the key barriers and elaborating on potential solutions It also provides a suggestion for improving the effectiveness of EU Africa cooperation While mainly intended for policymakers and academics this book also speaks to a broader audience interested in gaining an overview of the challenges and opportunities of the African energy sector today and in the future
