Author's Introduction

The author's introduction was written in 1831, thirteen years after its original publication, when it was re-released.

1. In her introduction, Mary Shelley writes, "It is true that I am very averse to bringing myself forward in print; but as my account will only appear as an appendage to a former production, and as it will be confined to such topics as have connection with my authorship alone, I can scarcely accuse myself of a personal intrusion." How does this line characterize Mary Shelley? What might it suggest about women writers in the early 19th century?
2. What is the tone of this introduction? Explain.
3. How does Mary Shelley compare herself to Percy Shelley in this introduction? With what does she credit him?
4. How does she describe herself in the presence of her husband and Lord Byron at Lord Byron's villa? Again, what does this suggest about her sense of self?
5. What do you make of Mary Shelley's reference to Frankenstein as "my hideous progeny"? What does she mean? How might you relate this idea to her life?

The Preface

6. The 1831 edition of the text contains a Preface which is not included in your book. (See the link to it online if you wish to read it.) It is commonly believed that the preface was actually written by Percy Shelley rather than his wife. Consider this in relation to Mary Shelley's introduction. What questions does this raise about the relationship between Mary and Percy Shelley?
7. What is ironic about the writing of the introduction and preface considering Mary Shelley's upbringing?

The Letters

An epistolary novel is written in the form of a series of letters exchanged among the characters. The term epistle can be defined as a literary letter. Although Frankenstein is not an entirely epistolary novel, it begins with three epistles.

8. Why would an author choose to write in an epistolary format? How is the epistolary format particularly effective for introducing Frankenstein?
9. How does Robert Walton describe his journey? How does this setting create a gothic mood?
10. Robert tells the stranger that he would sacrifice his existence and all his hope for the acquirement of knowledge. What is the stranger's response? What theme of the novel does the stranger's response suggest?
