All Roads Led To Shanghai:

All Roads Led to Shanghai Clio Calodoukas, 2013-01-25 My memoir All Roads led to Shanghai gives my readers a glimpse of an environment so different and exotic from present times when as a young girl during the 1930s and 1940s I lived in the unique International Settlement of Shanghai The city was a mix of Asian and European society when Chinese women still wore cheongsams and older men dressed in long black gowns while Japanese women wore kimonos and carried their babies on their backs Shanghai a thriving financial centre governed by the British did not require entry visas This allowed thousands of displaced people to arrive White Russians fleeing Bolshevik forces and European Jews escaping Nazi persecution Having lost their homes and most of their possessions these refugees had to learn to adapt They persevered and created a society that was diverse vibrant and colourful Shanghai's wealth also lured Chinese villagers to leave their farms and seek work in its factories It is within the context of these events that my family's story unfolded My family also sought refuge in China Among them my White Russian grandparents who had to flee from Vladivostok with their two daughters and my Greek father who had left Asia Minor just prior to the calamity that befell the Greeks when thousands including his parents perished in death marches Some years after arrival in Shanghai my father was able to buy The Astoria Caf and Confectionery which proved to be a very successful business The Astoria was renowned for its delicious cakes baked in the French tradition and for creating marvelous wedding cakes In 1931 my mother on a visit from Harbin and only 19 years old met my father and they married in the following year Shanghai offered them a wonderful social life and they spent their evenings going to dinner parties cabarets and concerts My sister and I were looked after by our caring Amah who became like a surrogate mother to us Meanwhile China was going through its own political upheavals The fall of the Ch'ing Dynasty had brought about a phase of enormous transition and a growing awareness of China's subjection to foreign demands A republic was formed but struggles ensued between Right and Left factions of the Kuomintang In 1937 a dominant Japan took advantage of the country's instability invaded and occupied Shanghai and a significant part of China World War II followed and it brought further suffering to China's inhabitants The end of WWII saw a re-emergence of hostilities between China's Left and Right factions Europeans began queuing at various consulates seeking visas to more stable destinations Our close friends and relatives kept departing leaving a void in our lives Shanghai was dear to us and my father could not be persuaded to leave until the sound of artillery shells exploding outside the city announced the approach of the People's Liberation Army Abandoning our home and possessions we finally had to make a hurried departure from a city we loved to arrive in Sydney Australia a few weeks later in June 1949 www.allroadsledtoshanghai.com All Roads Lead to the American City Peter Swirski, 2007-04-01 All Roads Lead to the American City provides an original view of the urban culture in America seen through its irrevocable ties with the cities and roads Examining the history cinema literature cultural myths and social geography of the United States the book puts some of the greatest as well as the baddest American cities under the microscope Taking the role of the roads that crisscross and connect the cities as their shared point of reference these essays explore ways to understand the people who live commute work create govern commit crime and conduct business in them Cities for the most part are America Their values and problems define not only what the United States is but what other nations perceive the United States to be Roads and transportation on the other hand and their impact on the American culture and lifestyle form not only the integral part of the historical rise and shine of the modern city but a physical release from and a cultural antidote to its pressure cooker stresses Tracing the boundless variety and complexity of these twin themes All Roads Lead to the American City is built around an interlinked series of essays on the urban culture in America Juxtaposing the city and the road it looks alternatively at cities as historical geographical social and cultural centres of life in the land and at roads as physical as well as metaphorical arteries that lead in and out of the city China Cuckoo Mark Kitto, 2010 Handbook of Asian Security Studies Sumit Ganguly, Andrew Scobell, Joseph Liow, 2009 Pearl Harbor to Guadalcanal Frank Olney Hough, Verle E. China Journal of Science and Arts, 1938 China and the Philippines Phillip B. Guingona, 2023-11-23 Foregrounding the entangled history of China and the Philippines Guingona brings to life an array of understudied but influential characters such as Filipino jazz musicians magnetic Chinese swimmers expert Filipino marksmen leading Chinese educators Philippine Chinese bankers Filipina Carnival Queens and many others Through archival research in multiple languages this innovative study advances a more nuanced reading of world history reframing our understanding of the first half of the twentieth century by bringing interactions between Asian people to the fore and minimizing the role of those who historically dominated global history narratives Through methodologically distinct case studies Guingona presents a critique of Eurocentric approaches to world global history shedding light on the interconnected history of China and the Philippines in a transformative period This title is part of the Flip it Open Programme and may also be available Open Access Check our website Cambridge Core for details
