Mcfadden, Mark Brennan, 2014-05-01 Examine the questions of how what and why associated with religiousness and spirituality in the lives of older adults New Directions in the Study of Late Life Religiousness and Spirituality explores new ways of thinking about a topic that was once taboo but that has now attracted considerable attention from the gerontological community. It examines various approaches to methodology and definition that are used in the study of religion, spirituality, and aging. In addition, it explores the ways that gerontological research can highlight the role of religion and spirituality in the lives of older adults. The first section will introduce you to new ways of thinking about research methodology and data analysis that can be applied to studying the complexity of older adults' religious, spiritual practice, and beliefs. You will learn several approaches to the study of phenomena that are both personal and also deeply embedded in community. The second section addresses issues of definition, exploring important questions that call for critical reflection, such as: What are we studying? What social and psychological influences shape our thinking about definition? Do the definitions used by gerontologists match those held by older people? The final section moves the study of religion, spirituality, and aging beyond a focus on health and mortality to examine well-being more broadly in the context of the life experiences of older adults. Here is a small sample of what you will learn about in New Directions in the Study of Late Life Religiousness and Spirituality: structural equation modeling, a statistical method designed to capture the dynamics inherent in the passage of time; feminist qualitative methods for studying spiritual resiliency in older women; spirituality as a public health issue; the differences between groups of older people in the way they define religion and spirituality; the psychosocial implications of two types of religious orientation: dwelling and seeking; older women's responses to the experience of widowhood; and to the question of whether their religious beliefs were affected by the experience. How social context influences our decisions and our interpretations of people's religious beliefs, behaviors, and experiences; the ways that people caring for a spouse with dementia rely on religious coping; a model that delineates three different ways people relate to God in coping; and a study that asks whether these types of coping produce different outcomes for caregivers. How people adjust to bereavement as a function of their beliefs about an afterlife.

New Dimensions in Spirituality, Religion, and Aging

Vern Bengtson, Merrill Silverstein, 2018-09-03 New Dimensions in Spirituality, Religion, and Aging expands the traditional focus of religiosity to include and evaluate recent research and discoveries on the role of secular spirituality in the aging process. Contributors examine the ways conventional religion and other forms of spirituality affect human development, health, and longevity, and they demonstrate how myth creation enables humans to make meaning in their lives. Taken together, the book points to further research to enhance current knowledge, approaches to care, and social policies.
