

Safe Manual Handling

Overview

Over 400,000 accidents arise from manual handling activities, and of these, half affect the back.

Key Safety Messages

When lifting, always use your legs and avoid bending at the waist. Make sure you have a clear route to take, and avoid carrying heavy loads for long periods of time. If you must lift, make sure you have a good grip and keep your back straight.

Key Manual Handling Hazard Factors

- Weight of the object and distance.
- Shape of object.
- Slipped grip.
- Height.

The Human Body

The back is composed of a series of three joints or vertebrae, interconnected by connecting discs. These discs and muscle mass in the spine, play such an important role in ensuring that the back is able to move.

Risk Assessment

How to assess the potential risk of carrying out manual handling tasks, and how to take a range of control measures to reduce such risks. This section will show the steps to an acceptable risk, health & safety legislation, the factors and the practicalities of manual handling with the right equipment, and the best practices. When carrying out more complex, more dynamic tasks, be certain to plan.

The assessment should consider risks to the TEL factors:

Task

- Is the task mechanical or physical?
- Is it necessary or necessary to use equipment?
- Can the task be split into smaller tasks that can be managed?
- Are there any specific problems with the task to health and safety?

Person

- Does the worker have any health issues?
- Are pregnant women involved in lifting?
- Are the health issues causing instability?

Environment

- What other tasks will be performed, including at height?
- Are there obstructions in the floor?
- Are there enough lights?
- Are there enough points of support, such as high stools?

Employer & Employee Duties

Employer

- Make sure that load is not forced by their employees.
- Make arrangements a safe system of work based on the assessment.
- Make sure manual handling advice, training and assistance is given to all employees.
- Make sure any required tools are for an employee.
- Make available information and training on safe manual handling systems.

Employee

- Make efforts to prevent strain of back.
- Make use of equipment and lifting assistance.
- Make understand training offered by the employer.
- Make report any concerns or any risks to the company's procedures.

Provision of Tools

- In order to understand what you should do:
- Lift with weight, not your spine and the rest of the person you are lifting.
- Use your legs, not your back.
- Lift using your legs, not your back.
- Always use your back when carrying loads.
- Always use your back when carrying loads.
- Report any incidents which give you a pain.

Good Handling Technique

Planning

- Can I carry the load?
- How far, along what distance?
- Do I need help?
- What alternative is the way?
- Do I need any personal protection or any equipment to help me?

Preparation

- Keep load equal with one hand leading after other.
- Keep the spine straight and relaxed.
- Bend from the knees - do not twist over the back.

Move

- Ensure a good grip on the material you are lifting.
- Use your legs.
- Use your back.

Push

- Push the load forward.
- Use your weight - no unnecessary.
- Use the legs first, not the back.
- Keep the load light against the body and any time you are moving.
- Push from the back, not by twisting.
- If necessary, use the front wheel to adjust your path.
