Agroecology, Ecosystems and Sustainability in the Tropics G. Poyyamoli, 2017-06-26 Tropical ecosystems are some of the most biologically and ecologically diverse in the world Traditional local agroecosystems in the tropics reflect this diversity and provide excellent examples of how nature can be used as the model for designing and managing sustainable agroecosystems This book brings together such examples Using an agroecological approach the collection of chapters demonstrates how agroecology must simultaneously be a science a practice and a movement for social change towards a paradigm of sustainability that engages all parts of the food system from the field to the table Chapter contributors were selected from multiple countries and backgrounds providing a valuable diversity of approaches and knowledge systems and the interaction of these systems gives this book the important transdisciplinarity that has become a key component of agroecology Working across disciplines and knowledge systems is necessary in order to link the multiple components of food systems that promote effective change As food systems return to the diversity complexity and resilience they once had it is collections of experiences as presented in this book that provide examples of the path we must be on Steve Gliessman Professor Emeritus of Agroecology University of California Santa Cruz USA

Introduction to Agroecology C.D. Caldwell, Songliang Wang, 2021-01-19 This textbook applies basic concepts of ecology to address critical issues regarding food and agricultural systems. The intended audience is first year undergraduate students it may also benefit higher level undergraduates with an interest in agriculture and ecology. The level of science and general knowledge reflects this target group. The text is divided into five sections with 22 chapters in all. Each chapter has its own student learning objectives. The first two sections Context of Agroecology and Basics of Agroecosystems provide a sound basis for the further study of agriculture from an ecological standpoint. Section 3 Digging Deeper into Agroecosystems explores the related issues of hunger wastes climate change and biodiversity. It is suggested that students study these three sections before proceeding to section 4 or 5. Section 4 Application of Agroecosystem Concepts introduces students to agricultural production and challenges them to use the concepts and ideas from the first three sections to critically evaluate such production systems. Section 5 Agroecosystem Management brings the coverage full circle by examining global solutions and opportunities from both a scientific and social economic standpoint. Particularly these last four chapters offer both food for thought and inspiration for further work. The book's goal is not to provide a comprehensive literature review rather it offers extensive data on and a stimulating analysis of the topic.

Agroecological Economics Paul Wojtkowski, 2010-07-28

Agroecology is the science of applying ecological concepts and principles to the design development and management of sustainable agricultural systems. Agroecological economics a subsection of agricultural economics evaluates the ecological consequences of agricultural methods on the economic scale. Agroecological economics considers green engineering as a means of measurement. As the environmental movement unfolds the importance of biodiversity and long term sustainability are indisputable. Progress depends on determining the economic viability of terrestrial agroecosystems. What is lacking is the analysis needed to bring biodiverse and sustainable systems to fruition. Agroecological Economics analyzes the current topics that must be addressed in order to provide sustainable agricultural systems. It explains the economics of land use ecology with emphasis on changing over from a conventional model of agriculture to environmentally and ecologically friendly models and the financial incentives that are important to these practices. Analyzes agricultural solutions with economic testing. Includes a complete analysis of recent biodiversity based research with valuable new economic methodologies. Provides various applications to mitigate the problems which have economic and ecological effects on agroecosystems. Offers applications of ecologically sound land use practices in production and manufacturing.

Political Ecology of Agriculture

Omar Felipe Giraldo, 2019-02-28 This study discusses an original proposal aimed at critically analyzing the power relations that exist in contemporary agriculture. The author endeavors herein to clarify some of the strategies that industrial agribusiness in collusion with the state and multilateral structures sets in motion in order to functionalize the lives of millions of farmers so that their bodies enunciations and sensibilities can be repurposed in accordance with the dynamics of capital accumulation. The argument is based on the idea that agro extractivism cannot be thought of exclusively as an economic political and technological system but as a complex interweaving of cultural meanings aesthetics and affections which amalgamated under the abstract name of development act as a support for the whole system's scaffolding. The book also explores the other side of the coin describing how and under what conditions social movements are responding to the calamities generated by this model. The central thesis is that many ongoing agroecological processes are providing one of the most interesting guidelines at present for visualizing transitions towards post development post extractivism and the construction of multiple worlds beyond the sphere of capital. Political ecology of agriculture joins the calls that question the cultural project of modernity and the predatory sense imposed by the globalized food empire and invites recognition of the importance of agroecology in the context of the end of the fossil fuel era and the likely collapse of our industry based civilization.

Food Sovereignty, Agroecology and Biocultural Diversity Michel. P. Pimbert, 2017-11-01
Contestations over knowledge and who controls its production are a key focus of social movements and other actors that promote food sovereignty agroecology and biocultural diversity. This book critically examines the kinds of knowledge and ways of knowing needed for food sovereignty agroecology and biocultural diversity. Food sovereignty is understood here as a transformative process that seeks to recreate the democratic realm and regenerate a diversity of autonomous food systems based on agroecology biocultural diversity equity social justice and ecological sustainability. It is shown that alternatives to the current model of development require radically different knowledges and epistemologies from those on offer today in mainstream institutions including universities policy think tanks and donor organizations. To achieve food sovereignty agroecology and biocultural diversity there is a need to re imagine and construct knowledge for diversity decentralisation dynamic adaptation and democracy. The authors critically explore the changes in organizations research paradigms and professional practice that could help transform and co create knowledge for a new modernity based on plural definitions of wellbeing. Particular attention is given to institutional pedagogical and methodological innovations that can enhance cognitive justice by giving hitherto excluded citizens more power and agency in the construction of knowledge. The book thus contributes to the democratization of knowledge and power in the domain of food environment and society. Fertile Ground: Scaling Agroecology from the Ground Up Steven Brescia, 2017-03-20 Agroecology is our best option for creating an agrifood system capable of nurturing people societies and the planet But it is still not widespread Fertile Ground offers nine case studies authored by agroecologists from Africa Latin America the Caribbean North America and Europe that demonstrate how the endogenous practice of agroecology can be scaled so that it is known by more farmers practiced more deeply and integrated in planning and policy Transition to Agro-Ecology Jelleke de Nooy van Tol, 2016-09-29 Our global agricultural and food system is broken and needs to transition to one that is more sustainable and beneficial to the worlds population This seems hard in the face of the linked challenges of climate change natural resource depletion and worldwide economic and social upheaval At the same time farmer led social movements are growing and there is increasing recognition that agroecology and food sovereignty are key solutions for both nutritious food security and climate change adaptation This book takes you along in the transition to agroecology which is already happening worldwide The author shows us the as of yet dispersed but growing movement of many smallholder farmers projects programs research and policy agendas that are making the change Since the daily news prevents us from noticing Jelleke shows us the most beautiful and intriguing examples of ground breaking people and projects She gives you the keys for transition She makes us look back from 2030 What have we done by then you and I your friends and colleagues investors and politiciansto have arrived in a changed food secure world where agroecology is the new normal This book is a must read for researchers politicians students and consumers alike Growing and Eating Sustainably Dana James, Evan Bowness, 2021-10-30T00:00:00Z The industrial food system from production to consumption and waste is a major contributor to environmental social and economic problems A few powerful multinational corporations have consolidated control of agricultural markets and wealth while many farmers struggle to make a living and millions of people go hungry every day Consumer access to healthy and culturally appropriate food remains largely an option for only those who can afford it. Responding to these destructive practices global agrarian movements are calling for a transition to agroecology. Agroecological farming follows ecological principles for growing food in a way that respects diverse sociocultural contexts connects urban eaters and rural growers and attends to power dynamics. Growing and Eating Sustainably shines light on the process of agroecological transition by showcasing the experiences of growers and eaters in southern Brazil a country where agrarian movements have long been at the forefront of pushing for more sustainable and just food systems. Through stories and photographs of people landscapes farms and farming practices and urban spaces this book communicates how to advance systems level agroecological transitions by linking rural and urban areas and connecting diverse agroecological experiences. Deep Agroecology and the Homeric Epics John W. Head, 2020-12-15 Drawing on the Homeric epics this multidisciplinary work reveals the cultural transformations which need to take place in order to transition from today's modern extractive agricultural system to a sustainable natural systems agriculture. In order to provide an imaginative foundation on which to build such a cultural transformation the author draws on the oldest and most pervasive pair of literary works in the Western canon the Iliad and the Odyssey. He uses themes from those foundational literary works to critique the concept of state sovereignty and to explain how innovative federalism structures around the world already show momentum building toward changes in global environmental governance. The book proposes a dramatic expansion on those innovations to create eco states responsible for agroecological management. Drawing from many years of experience in international institutions the author proposes a system of coordination by which an international agroecology focused organization would simultaneously i) avoid the shortcomings of the world's current family of powerful global institutions and ii) help create and implement a reformed system of local landscape based agriculture wholly consistent with ecological principles. Acknowledging the difficulty of achieving reforms such as these the author suggests that a new cultural conceptual narrative can be constructed drawing on values set forth 2 700 years ago in the Homeric epics. He explains how these values can be reimagined to drive forward our efforts in addressing today's the climate and agricultural crises in ways that reflect not reject the natural processes and relationships that make the Earth a living planet. This book will be of great interest to students academics and policymakers addressing issues of agrarian values environmental and agricultural law environmental restoration agroecology and global institutional reform.
