APA STYLE

What is APA style? APA style is a writing convention that is used by writers in the social and behavioral sciences. It is a set of guidelines that governs the format of a paper, from the title page to the references. The purpose of APA style is to ensure that all papers are written in a consistent manner, making it easier for readers to find and understand the information. APA style is also used to ensure that all papers are written in a clear and concise manner, making it easier for readers to understand the information.

Writing the title page, abstract, and introduction

The title page is the first page of a paper. It should contain the title of the paper, the author's name, and the institution. The abstract is a brief summary of the paper, usually no more than 100 words. The introduction is the first part of the paper, usually no more than 10% of the total length. It should introduce the topic, state the purpose of the study, and provide a brief overview of the findings.

Writing the literature review and conclusion

The literature review is a section of the paper that reviews the existing research on the topic. It should be organized into sections, with each section focusing on a different aspect of the topic. The conclusion is the final part of the paper, usually no more than 10% of the total length. It should summarize the findings of the study and provide a brief overview of the implications.

Writing the body of the paper

The body of the paper is the main part of the paper, usually no more than 80% of the total length. It should be organized into sections, with each section focusing on a different aspect of the topic. The sections should be clearly labeled, and the information should be presented in a clear and concise manner. The body of the paper should also include a discussion of the findings and their implications.

Writing the references

The references are the sources of information used in the paper. They should be listed in a separate section at the end of the paper, usually no more than 10% of the total length. The references should be organized alphabetically by the author's name. Each reference should include the author's name, the title of the work, and the publication information.

MLA STYLE

What is MLA style? MLA style is a writing convention that is used by writers in the liberal arts and humanities. It is a set of guidelines that governs the format of a paper, from the title page to the references. The purpose of MLA style is to ensure that all papers are written in a consistent manner, making it easier for readers to find and understand the information.
