estimates and others other estimates as well as their actual donations to charity doing so at an individual level to challenge the prevailing wisdom that indirect responses are more accurate and useful for research than direct responses I conceptualize accuracy in terms of both the mean and correlations I show that although mean level results sometimes show other estimates to be closer to actual behavior they are not consistently so and explain this inconsistency and further that correlations show self estimates to always better reflect actual donations than other estimates These results support the use of self estimates in the ethical domain and argue against the existence of projection in marketing research donation responses
