The spotlight on Asperger Syndrome has been widening with recent attention from mainstream media. This neurological condition often misdiagnosed as Attention Deficit Disorder Obsessive Compulsive Disorder or high functioning autism is increasingly being recognized and now affects an estimated 10 million children and adults in the United States alone. Unlike autistic individuals Asperger sufferers have normal or above normal language intelligence and cognition and are often seen as brilliant verbose with formal speech patterns and superior memory but they have odd interests unusual reactions to the environment inflexibility in routines poor interaction with people and inability to form age appropriate relationships. There is no known cure but as Suzanne Lawton explains in this work there are approaches that can reduce or remove the symptoms. While traditional medications are the only option for some sufferers there are those who can benefit from the natural treatments offered by herbal medicine diet and nutrition homeopathy and amino acids. These drug free approaches also reduce the physical problems common to Asperger sufferers including stomachaches and headaches and irritable bowel syndrome says Lawton. Recent FDA warnings regarding the use of psychotropic medications with children previous treatment has focused on anti anxiety anti depressant and mood stabilizing drugs have fueled the outcry of parents who want to get their children off drugs to avoid the side effects. Here Lawton takes an evenhanded look at Asperger Syndrome its development and symptoms the biological and potential genetic components the associated physical complaints and how natural medicine can help. She includes a history of early treatment and current drug and psychotherapy treatments and explains how diet blood sugar and food sensitivities or allergies can play a role. Our Journey Through High Functioning Autism and Asperger Syndrome Linda Andron, 2001. This is an excellent travelers guide because it is written by people who have been there. The stories are enthralling and the authors experiences enable us to understand the culture and perspective of people with autistic spectrum disorder. This book is recommended for anyone who has embarked on a journey to explore a part of our world that we have only recently discovered from the foreword by Tony Attwood I had a great many of my hunches and hopes confirmed when I read the words of the generous parents and their even more generous children who contributed to this book. Most important I learned it is possible to be inspired to see the glass as half full no matter how many leaks there seem to be in the cup. I believe the community who reads this book will join me in thanking those who wrote it for their courage their wit and their plethora of ideas from the foreword by Liane Holliday

Willey For the families who have contributed to this book living with autism spectrum disorders has been a journey of self discovery With honesty and humor they describe the ways autism has affected their daily lives the challenges they have faced and the approaches they have found beneficial They share their practical and original strategies for dealing with issues such as helping children to develop empathy and humor developing and maintaining friendships and explaining their autism spectrum disorders to other people This book will be a source of advice and inspiration for families of children with autism and the professionals who work with them It is practical realistic and positive autism is seen as something to be understood and celebrated As 11 year old Glen states in the Appendix written by some of the children with autism featured in the book I like myself and consider my difference something positive Linda Andron is a licensed clinical social worker Adjunct Lecturer in Psychiatry and Bio Behavioural Sciences and Clinical Instructor at the University of California at Los Angeles She is the director of the UCLA Family Support Community Program and the clinical director of the Center for Asperger's Assessment and Intervention at the HELP Group She has worked with over 500 families of children with High Functioning Autism and Asperger Syndrome and is a member of the Professional Advisory Board of the Autism Society of Los Angeles She has written many articles and chapters on developmental disabilities

Living Outside the Boxe Steven Borovay,2016-06-15

There was a time I could not see the light at the end of the tunnel In May 2005 when my son was diagnosed with autism my five year marriage a total disaster and I had to sacrifice a career I worked so hard to obtain to insure my son received all the outside services he needed there was no light only darkness However everything changed when I ignored the present and projected where I wanted my son to be done the road Jonathan received intensive therapies only having about a 20 25 word vocabulary in 2005 Now I'm down that road and he won't stopped talking I went back to a former career that I hated and learned to love what I did I focused on my core strength of everything involving numbers and did incredibly well in the stock market Then when one of the three most important people my dad passed away my world was rocked like never before Again there was no light at the end of the tunnel The pain at first was constant as every time my telephone rang I was hoping it was my dad I would hear his strong voice in my head constantly As time went by I would be going along with my day when all of a sudden the intense emotional pain would return I then read a letter from my best friend s mother Rose In that letter she wrote as time goes by the stone fallen in the pond sends out ripples that are larger at first but smaller as more time goes by Finally that ripple finally disappears into the pond of the unconscious It s there that special memories return in a loving way No pain just pleasurable memories Further on in Rose s letter she wrote growing older we find ourselves mirror images of our parents fighting against becoming them But in the end we do become our own person as at long last we can do whatever we want without recriminations without the threat of loss of love loss of approval from the ever watchful parent Few of us escape from self imposed bonds and perhaps our own entrapments When a parent dies we look into ourselves on another level a level we have never been at before It wasn t my choice for my parents to physically leave this planet However like the words from The Byrds song Turn Turn Turn To everything turn turn turn There is a season turn turn turn And a time to every purpose under heavenA time to be born a time to dieA time to plant a time to reapA time to kill a time to healA time to laugh a time to weepTo everything turn turn turn There is a season turn turn turn And a time to every purpose under heavenI found a happiness I never knew I m just part of the circle of life and my last chapters are going to be a dozy My book Living Outside The Boxe was written to serve as an inspiration for those who have a special needs child where you cannot see the light at end of the tunnel To those of you who suffered a loss that at the moment seems unbearable My book is for adults as the last chapters are pretty graphic and show my twisted sense of humor With the passing of my parents I finally discovered who I am and with that a happiness I never experienced before Finally I found out that based on the way I ve been programmed with Aspergers Syndrome I always tried to remain true to myself as strange and bizarre as it was to others

Life Without a Script Ian Andersen McDougal,2021-04-26 As a person who has had to live with Asperger Syndrome the world has always seemed for the most part incomprehensible with its subtlety subjectivity and alien social rules Gaining the necessary skills to survive in such a world is a long and painstaking process With this book I hope to pass on some of the lessons I have learned through out my life and what were the obstacles that most troubled me and took the greatest effort to surpass
