Mapping Writing Revisions through Keystroke Logging Tanzeela Anbreen, 2025-12-29 This book presents Keystroke Logging as a powerful methodological tool for investigating writers revision processes in writing The volume demonstrates the ways in which Keystroke Logging can be used to observe record and analyse writing revisions in real time especially useful given the growing use of computer facilitated academic writing Drawing on an integrated approach implementing both real time observation and immediate stimulated recall Anbreen seeks to bridge the gap between theory and practice by bringing together theoretical understandings of writing revisions with practical applications of Keystroke Logging The work makes the case for the use of Keystroke Logging in computer based writing research to better elucidate the cognitive processes L2 writers engage in during the revision process This book will be of interest to students scholars and relevant stakeholders in applied linguistics second language writing academic writing language learning and teaching and educational technology

Translating the Bible Literally Michael T. Schmid, 2016-05-31 Differences in translation between so called literal Bible versions make it quite appropriate to re evaluate what is meant by the label literal What do different literal Bible translations have in common How do they differ How do we account for possible different concepts of literalness How is the concept of literalness applied to the making of a Bible translation To answer these questions the author compares three literal Bible translations the King James Version the New American Standard Bible and the English Standard Version For each of these versions the historical background and the writings of the translators themselves are analysed The book concludes with a comparison of the three translations in their renderings of selected examples from the Gospel of John
