Bridging The Values Gap How Authentic Organizations Bring Values To Life:

Bridging the Values Gap R. Edward Freeman, Ellen R. Auster, 2015-08-17 Business has a values problem. It's not just spectacular public scandals like Enron which incidentally had a great corporate values statement. Many companies fail to live up to the standards they set for themselves alienating the public and leaving employees cynical and disengaged resulting in lower productivity less innovation and sometimes outright corruption. The reason argue top scholars and consultants Edward Freeman and Ellen Auster is that most companies values are handed down from on high with no employee input or discussion. This practically invites disconnects between intention and reality. To bridge this values gap Freeman and Auster provide a process Values through Conversation that focuses on four key types of values introspective reflecting on who we are and how we do things historical understanding our past and how it influences us relational asking how we can best work together and aspirational articulating our hopes and dreams. By developing values through discussions casual or formal one on one or in groups VTC ensures that they are dynamic and evolving not static words on a wall or a website. Freeman and Auster offer advice real world examples and sample questions to help you create values that are authentic and embraced because they are rooted in the lived experience of the organization.
