Handbook on bentonite-bonded moulding material Werner Tilch, Michael Franke, Hartmut Polzin, 2020-02-27 According to estimates modern foundries in Germany Europe and worldwide replace about 70 % of their lost moulds with moulds made of bentonite bonded materials The main mould components are quartz sand bentonite and water These components are compacted in one of the most productive procedures in the foundry One of the main advantages of this moulding material system is the ability to restore the bonding power of most of the material This ability creates a moulding material circulation system This system and the use of mostly inorganic moulding materials make this creation of moulds the most environmentally friendly choice for the cast part production Because of this circulation of moulding materials and specifically because of the bentonite water bonding system the preparation of moulds made from bentonite bonded moulding materials is very different from making moulds and cores using materials with chemical binders This manual describes the handling and preparation of bentonite bonded moulding materials as well as the moulding material recovery and re use after forming the cast part Handy-book of Literary Curiosities William S. Britain One of the most important results of the excavation has come from intensive environmental and micro debris sampling of house floors and outdoor areas to recover patterns of discard and to interpret the spatial use of 15 domestic interiors from the Late Bronze Age to the Early Iron Age From Cladh Hallan s roundhouse floors we gain intimate insights into how daily life was organized within the house where people cooked ate worked and slept Such evidence rarely survives from prehistoric houses in Britain or Europe and the results make a profound contribution to long running debates about the sunwise organisation of roundhouse activities Activity at Cladh Hallan ended with the construction and abandonment of two unusual double roundhouses in the Early Iron Age One appears to have been a smokery and steam room and the other was used for metalworking
