Bridging Boundaries Through Regional Marine Research National Research Council, Commission on Geosciences, Environment, and Resources, Ocean Studies Board, Committee on the Assessment of Regional Marine Research Programs, 2000-04-06 As appreciation of the interdisciplinary and multidimensional character of environmental issues has increased there have been attempts to address regional needs more directly One of these the Regional Marine Research Program RMRP was established by Congress in 1990 to provide a mechanism to fund coastal marine research based on regionally defined priorities The RMRP legislation established a system of nine regional marine research boards around the United States Each board was responsible for planning marine research to address issues of water quality and ecosystem health on a regional scale Although all nine regions received funding for planning activities and development of a research plan only the Gulf of Maine RMRP received funding for program implementation The completion of the Gulf of Maine program in 1997 presents an opportunity to evaluate whether the process for planning and managing the Gulf of Maine research was adequate whether the research fulfilled the goals of the program and whether this experience should serve as a model for similar regional programs elsewhere Bridging Boundaries through Regional Marine Research is a study of the RMRP with a specific review of the Gulf of Maine program as well as an assessment of other models for regional marine research This report assesses the need for regional marine research reviews processes by which regional marine research needs can be defined and discusses existing programs for regional marine research in the United States It also identifies short and long term approaches that might be taken by NOAA A Review of the Ocean Research Priorities Plan and Implementation Strategy National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Ocean Studies Board, Committee to Review the Joint Subcommittee on Ocean Science and Technology's Research Priorities Plan, 2007-10-25 Ocean research offers countless benefits from improving fisheries management to discovering new drugs to enabling early detection of tsunamis and hurricanes At the request of the Joint Subcommittee on Ocean Science and Technology JSOST the National Research Council convened a committee to review the draft and final versions of the Ocean Research Priorities Plan and Implementation Strategy described in Charting the Course for Ocean Science in the United States Research Priorities for the Next Decade which represents the first coordinated national ocean research planning effort involving all federal agencies that support ocean science The plan presents an ambitious vision for ocean research that will be of great benefit to the ocean sciences community and the nation This book contains both sets of findings i e the committee's review of the JSOST's draft plan A Review of the Draft Ocean Research Priorities Plan Charting the Course for Ocean Science in the United States and the review of the final plan This book recommends that JSOST employ a variety of outreach mechanisms to continue to engage nonfederal partners in ocean research planning efforts such as establishing external committees to provide scientific and technical advice and to review progress on implementation of the research plan San Francisco Bay National
