show of empathy was not entirely surprising. Vatwani knew what poverty was like. Losing his father when he was only 12 years old forced him and his brothers to take odd jobs like peddling books door to door. Struggling through school as a self-supporting student, Vatwani successfully completed his medical studies in psychiatry at Grant Medical College and at G S Medical College, providing free shelter, food, and psychiatric treatment and reuniting them with their families. Starting with a two-room tenement that could take only three people at a time, Shraddha drew public attention when they rescued and treated a street person who turned out to be a respected lecturer at a Mumbai art school who had inexplicably disappeared. Learning about what the Vatwanis had done, the school's faculty and students organized a major art exhibition that drew 141 participating artists in India and abroad and successfully raised US $22,357. Using this seed money, the Vatwanis bought a piece of property in Mumbai for a 20-bed facility that they opened in 1997. The unexpected donation inspired them to further expand their work with the help of private donors, volunteer professionals, and social workers. In 2006, they moved to a bigger 120-patient facility in Karjat, outside Mumbai, which had five buildings on a 6.5-acre land. By then, they had strengthened their three-phase therapeutic program consisting of the rescue and treatment of mentally ill street persons, reuniting patients with their families, and promoting awareness of mental health in communities. Their rescue work has been aided by the police, social workers, and referrals. Shraddha's free custodial care and treatment ranges from personal hygiene, medical check-ups, psychiatric treatment, to appropriate medication, all done in the open, healing environment of the Karjat facility, where patients can engage in simple farm activities and find solace in a multi-religious meditation center. The foundation tracks patients, families, arranges reunions, and uses such opportunities to spread a supportive and enlightened understanding of mental health among the families and their communities. In a one-of-a-kind mission that began in 1988, Vatwani and the foundation have by now rescued, treated, and reintegrated into their families and communities more than 7,000 of India's mentally ill roadside destitute, with a remarkable reunion rate of 95%. Vatwani's painstaking humane undertaking has had to contend with numerous challenges. A deeply spiritual person, the good doctor is often beset by doubts whether he has done enough, given the magnitude of the mental health problem in his country. Notwithstanding these self-doubts, he remains confident in his faith that in the end, Good work shall continue when there is inherent goodness in the work. In electing Bharat Vatwani to receive the 2018 Ramon Magsaysay Award, the board of trustees recognizes his tremendous courage and healing compassion in embracing India's mentally afflicted destitute and his steadfast and magnanimous dedication to the work of restoring and affirming the human dignity of even the most ostracized in our midst.

Orfeo's Exile. The Nexus between Emotion and Reason, 2019-12-23 Seminar paper from the year 2015 in the subject German Studies / Older German Literature / Medieval Studies, grade 1.7, language English, abstract: The goal of this paper is to provide the philosophical medieval notion of emotion and reason and subsequently to investigate how emotion and reason relate to each other in the poem Sir Orfeo. The Middle English romance Sir Orfeo is an anonymous poem of the early fourteenth century (1330-40) that has found great resonance
