A Poverty of Objects Jonathan Monroe, 1987

The Lyric in Victorian Memory Veronica Alfano, 2017-11-11

This book is a study of nineteenth century poems that remember, yearn for, fixate on and forget the past. Reflecting the current critical drive to reconcile formalist and historicist approaches to literature, it uses close readings to trace the complex interactions between memory as a theme and the often memorable formal traits such as brevity, stanzaic structure and sonic repetition that appear in the lyrics examined. This book considers the interwoven nature of remembering and forgetting in the work of four Victorian poets. It uses this theme to shed new light on the relationship between lyric and narrative, on the connections between gender and genre and on the way in which Victorians represented and commemorated the past

Time and Temporalities in European Travel Writing Paula Henrikson, Christina

Kullberg, 2020-12-10

This book is a collective effort to investigate and problematise notions of time and temporality in European travel writing from the late medieval period up to the late nineteenth century. It brings together nine researchers in European travel writing and covers a wide range of areas, travel genres and languages, coherently integrated around the central theme of time and temporalities. Taken together, the contributions consider how temporal aspects evolve and change in regard to spatial, historical and literary contexts. In a chapter by chapter account, this volume thus offers various case studies that address the issue of temporality by showing, for example, how time is inscribed in landscape, how travellers' encounters with other temporalities informed other disciplines, it interrogates the idea of cultural temporalities in regard to a tension between past and future, passivity and progression, and focuses on how time is entangled in identity construction proper to travelogues

The Reception of Myth in English Romanticism Anthony John Harding, 1995

In The Reception of Myth in English Romanticism, Harding deals with those questions by examining how Romantic writers understood and received myth and what they understood the mythic to be. He shows how the Romantics' own mythmaking drew its meaning from the contemporary political scene and contemporary ideological conflicts rather than from a concept of myth as a timeless, unchanging source of value. Harding analyzes the uses of myth in selected texts of the period, covering the work of Wordsworth, Coleridge, Keats and Shelley, among others

Men and Memories William Rothenstein, 1932

Plato

and the City Gabriele Cornelli, Francisco L. Lisi, 2010 Plato's political philosophy is one of the most controversial facets of ancient thought. Because of its wide influence on the political thought of the last century most of Plato's ideas are still under debate and he is seen either as the origin of totalitarian movements or as the predecessor of the current rule of law and the father of western democracy. If the evaluation of Plato's different political proposals has been the object of contradictory interpretations his own appreciation of the existing political systems creates a matter of many historical debates too. This volume treats different aspects of Plato's conflicting relationship to the city state. It presents original approaches to Plato's reflections on the city and his problems.
