

Introduction

This is intended to be a supplementary manual for the use of the Uniden BCD396XT and BCD996XT scanners that have been introduced. Since introduction, there has been a wide observance that there "is no paper manual included" and that the "Wiki just isn't the same". With this in mind, this document will try to help those making these observations.

First Step(s)

Go here and download the old manual(s) for your device:

for the BCD396XT (copy of the BCD396T manual)

<http://www.uniden.com/pdf/BCD396Tom.pdf>

for the BCD996XT (copy of the BCD996T manual)

<http://www.uniden.com/pdf/BCD996Tom.pdf>

Yes, these are the older manuals, BUT since the difference between the T and the XT models is more EVolutionary than REVolutionary, they should work to get you started and cover most of the topics. What this document will do is to add the differences here, in one place, for both 396 and 996 models since they have been "normalized" or made to work more or less the same.

Major Difference for BCD396XT

When the BCD396T was introduced, it did not have the capability of multi-site systems. This was rectified with the introduction of the BCD996T. When Uniden introduced the BCD396XT, this issue was addressed and multi-site systems are now available for the BCD396XT. Essentially this allows you to program multiple sites or towers for a single system - say a statewide system, or multi-jurisdictional systems. You now have a new menu option for site on the BCD396XT. If you need help with that, please see the site section of the BCD996T manual.

System/Channel Number Tagging

While scanning, there are times when you desire to go directly to a certain system or channel for instance if something is happening in the south part of town, or you just heard an interesting transmission on a channel and want to get back there. With Number tagging, you can do just that.

Number Tags

- Number Tags let you quickly navigate to a specific system or channel.
