

Nature vs. Nurture

Nature vs Nurture is a debate between scientists about what makes people who they are. Some people believe that we are born with certain traits and abilities, while others believe that we are shaped by our environment. Both sides have strong arguments, and it's difficult to see which side is right. In this article, we'll explore both sides of the debate and see what the science has to say.

One side of the debate is the idea that some traits are inherited from our parents. This is called the "nature" side of the debate. Scientists who support this side believe that certain traits, such as intelligence, personality, and physical appearance, are passed down from our parents. They believe that these traits are determined by our genes, which are passed down from our parents. They also believe that these traits are not affected by our environment. For example, they believe that a person's intelligence is determined by their genes, and that it cannot be changed by education or experience.

On the other side of the debate is the idea that our environment shapes who we are. This is called the "nurture" side of the debate. Scientists who support this side believe that our environment, such as our family, friends, and culture, plays a major role in shaping who we are. They believe that our environment can change our traits and abilities. For example, they believe that a person's intelligence can be improved by education and experience. They also believe that our environment can shape our personality and physical appearance. For example, they believe that a person's personality can be changed by their experiences, and that their physical appearance can be changed by their diet and exercise.

There are many examples of how nature and nurture interact. For example, a person's intelligence is determined by their genes, but it can be improved by education and experience. A person's personality is shaped by their environment, but it can also be influenced by their genes. A person's physical appearance is determined by their genes, but it can be changed by their diet and exercise. These examples show that nature and nurture are both important in shaping who we are.

Conclusion

The debate between nature and nurture is a complex one, and it's difficult to see which side is right. However, it's clear that both nature and nurture play a role in shaping who we are.

Social Inequality Heather M. Fitz Gibbon, Anne M. Nurse, Charles E. Hurst, 2019-07-02 Like past editions this tenth edition of Social Inequality Forms Causes and Consequences is a user friendly introduction to the study of social inequality This book conveys the pervasiveness and extensiveness of social inequality in the United States within a comparative context to show how inequality occurs how it affects all of us and what is being done about it This edition benefits from a variety of changes that have significantly strengthened the text The authors pay increased attention to disability intersectionality immigration religion and place This edition also spotlights crime and the criminal justice system as well as health and the environment

The tenth edition includes a new chapter on policy alternatives and venues for social change The "(no) negative evidence" problem: Nativist and social interactionist views on how children recover from grammatical errors Bünyamin Yuvarlak, 2021-03-23 Seminar paper from the year 2019 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 1 3 University of Bonn Institut für Anglistik Amerikanistik und Keltologie course Language Acquisition Psycholinguistik language English abstract This paper aims at exploring how the views on language acquisition have developed over time where they conflict each other and whether it is possible to position oneself on either side The nature vs nurture debate is an everlasting discussion not only in the area of linguistics but science in general This is what makes it particularly interesting because there is always new information to expect Furthermore it is an issue not limited to academic discourse only but one that appears in everyday conversation An interesting aspect of language acquisition more specifically the knowledge of language is the question if children arrive at such knowledge by the mere exposure to positive evidence i.e. the language of adults they are surrounded with or if negative evidence also has an impact i.e. children's knowledge of language is based on explicit or implicit feedback to whether an utterance was in some way incorrect The two terms will be defined and looked into in more detail in the second chapter In the following the correlation between the nature vs nurture debate and language acquisition will be explained first The respective chapter provides a brief insight into how the nativist approach developed mainly based on Chomsky's 1988 notion of Universal Grammar UG and the type of criticism it brought along It further explains the connection between the respective theories and the grammatical aspect of language acquisition In the last section the main problems of experience based language learning will be displayed and defined The third chapter starts with a section dedicated to where the particular view that humans need innate structures for a correct knowledge of language stems from It continues with a detailed look on the no negative evidence problem The non existence of negative evidence and which role it plays in terms of language acquisition will be explored from different standpoints by nativists as well as non nativists Inter-identities' in Life, Mind, and Society Arantza Etxeberria, Kepa Ruiz-Mirazo, Luisa Damiano, 2021-08-18
