Bill Hunter Max Brand,2015-12-08 Extract It was the big central taproot which baffled them They had hewed easily through the great side roots large as branches covered with soft brown bark they had dug down and cut through the forest of tender small roots below but when they had passed the main body of the stump and worked under it they found that their hole around the trunk was not large enough in diameter to enable them to reach to the taproot and cut through it They could only reach it feebly with the hatchet fraying it but there was no chance for a free swing to sever the tough wood Instead of widening the hole at once they kept laboring at the root working the stump back and forth as though they hoped to crystallize that stubborn taproot and snap it like a wire Still it held and defied them They laid hold of it together and tugged with a grunt something tore beneath that effort but the stump held and upward progress ceased They stopped too tired for profanity and gazed down the mountainside after the manner of baffled men who look far off from the thing that troubles them They could tell by the trees that it was a high altitude There were no cottonwoods though the cottonwoods will follow a stream for more than a mile above sea level Far below them a pale mist obscured the beautiful silver spruce which had reached their upward limit    Bull Hunter Max Brand,2014-04-04 Frederick Schiller Faust May 29 1892 May 12 1944 was an American author known primarily for his thoughtful and literary Westerns under the pen name Max Brand This is one of his novels
