

What Africa's Future Will Be

The period of 1980 to 2000 is largely defined by the economic, political and technological trends in global development and globalisation which affects international and exchange between people and nations around the world.

Major Regions of Africa: Africa's Main Economic

North Africa: Algeria, Libya, Egypt and Tunisia were among countries which were not by European powers during the first half of the 20th century. However, North Africa was controlled by France, England and Italy, while South America was controlled by Spain and Portugal.

West Africa: Economic growth started to take place after the 1960s when the region got independence from the European powers and later there were economic growth in the region. The region included Nigeria, Ghana, the Ivory Coast, Senegal, Guinea, Sierra Leone, Liberia, Upper Volta, Mauritania and Mauritius. South Africa, especially Portugal and Spain, were the main economic growth areas, especially in technology and innovation.

Eastern Africa and southern Africa: The African States continued to rely heavily on the European and British colonial Africa and Europe. South Africa remained a major player along the African continent, the British Empire and the United States (US).
