Abstract

Abstract and background: There are a number of reasons why the use of a single, one-dimensional measure of health-related quality of life (HRQL) is inadequate. The purpose of this study was to compare the use of a single measure of HRQL with the use of a multi-dimensional measure of HRQL in a clinical trial. Methods: A randomised controlled trial of a new treatment for a chronic condition was conducted. The primary outcome was the use of a single measure of HRQL, the EuroQol-5D. The secondary outcome was the use of a multi-dimensional measure of HRQL, the SF-36. Results: The results of the trial showed that the use of a single measure of HRQL was inadequate to detect a difference between the two groups. The use of a multi-dimensional measure of HRQL was able to detect a difference between the two groups. Conclusion: The use of a multi-dimensional measure of HRQL is more appropriate than the use of a single measure of HRQL in a clinical trial.
