Originally drawn to this slim book by its bright yellow cover and the clean-cut simplicity of its design, I was also put off, on closer inspection, by the reference to Chekhov in the subtitle. I had been frustrated in the past by books on 'how to write' that, while urging us to be more creative, failed to equip us to marry that creativity to the scholarly rigour demanded of the peer-reviewed journals in which most professional anthropologists must publish to survive. I was sceptical about whether the writings of a nineteenth-century Russian playwright and storyteller, inspiring as they might be, could offer much assistance in the more prosaic task of crafting academic texts. Nevertheless, since I was actively searching for new materials to teach an undergraduate research methods module – and encouraged by the fact that there were only 121 pages to get through in the main body of the book – I decided to read on anyway. I am glad I did. Chekhov, at least in Kirin Narayan's deft hands, proved to be a surprisingly solid source of advice for the ethnographic writer.

Far from the ethereal musings I had feared, this book is a real hands-on guide, or, as Narayan's husband described it, 'not a how-to manual but a how-about? manual'. Readers are encouraged to dip in and out, to read it out of sequence, and, at many junctures along the way, to set the book aside and undertake the writing exercises she sets us. There are a dozen or more such drills sprinkled throughout each of the five main chapters, demanding between two and fifteen minutes apiece to complete, as well as some longer ones – each calling for two pages of written text – at the end of every chapter. The work that they require of us broadly reflects the titles of the chapters: after an overview in 'Story and theory', subsequent chapters are entitled, simply, 'Place', 'Person', 'Voice', and 'Self', and encourage us to explore our data through these themes. One of the exercises I found most helpful – and which I earmarked as a starting-point for students preparing to write up their undergraduate dissertations – was one asking us to list theories 'that your most powerful experience might connect to', taking us beyond the literary to the synthesis of raw data and theoretical insight that the best ethnographic writing produces. We should not, though, be hoodwinked into thinking of creative and academic writing as two mutually exclusive domains. 'Professional survival and success can depend on learning to strategically pitch a voice to a setting, even as it remains your own', as Narayan writes. 'At the same time, ventures into alternative creative spaces that allow more experimentation with one's full expressive range – without fears for livelihood – can, I believe, deepen and enrich a professional voice' (p. 60). With a little help from Chekhov, she convinced me. Chekhov, we learn, works for Narayan as an 'ethnographic muse' in at least three ways. First, his impressive corpus of writing, like that of any competent ethnographer, draws self-consciously on a wide range of perspectives, places, and lifeworlds, and demonstrates how

Chekhov's Sakhalin Journey Jonathan Cole, 2023-12-14 Chekhov often said that I am a doctor by trade and sometimes I do literary work in my free time a surprising claim given his status as a giant of 20th century drama This literary biographical study uncovers new sides to him as both a medical professional and humanitarian and tells the story of Chekhov's trip to Sakhalin Island in the harsh wastes of Siberia Anton Chekhov practiced medicine for most of his life and engaged in humanitarian work which took him away from writing for months He placed one such trip though across the unforgiving terrain of Siberia to write about the penal island of Sakhalin above all others Chekhov's Sakhalin Journey written by a neuroscientist and practicing clinician uses this trip and Chekhov's own account of it to shed light on hitherto overlooked aspects of his life In doing so it shows that to understand the man we need his medicine as well as his literature and we need to assess his life from his perspective as well as ours

Writing Anthropology Carole McGranahan, 2020-05-01 In Writing Anthropology fifty two anthropologists reflect on scholarly writing as both craft and commitment. These short essays cover a wide range of territory from ethnography genre and the politics of writing to affect storytelling authorship and scholarly responsibility. The Anthropologist as Writer Helena Wulff, 2016-03-01 Writing is crucial to anthropology but which genres are anthropologists expected to master in the 21st century? This book explores how anthropological writing shapes the intellectual content of the discipline and academic careers. First chapters identify the different writing genres and contexts anthropologists actually engage with. Second this book argues for the usefulness and necessity of taking seriously the idea of writing as a craft and of writing across and within genres in new ways. Although academic writing is an anthropologist's primary genre they also write in many others from drafting administrative texts and filing reports to composing ethnographically inspired journalism and fiction.
