

All-or-Nothing Thinking Worksheet

Patient Name: John Doe

Date: 2023-09-20

Instructions: This worksheet is designed to help you recognize and address all-or-nothing thinking patterns. By completing this form, you can gain insight into your cognitive processes and work towards fostering more balanced perspectives. Please take your time to fill it out honestly and thoughtfully.

1. Identification

- Describe a situation where you recently engaged in all-or-nothing thinking.
- What triggered this thought pattern? Be specific.

Situation: During a recent work presentation, I made a minor mistake, and I immediately thought I was a total failure.

Trigger: The mistake I made in my presentation.

2. Record Your Thoughts

- Write down the all-or-nothing thoughts you had in that situation.
- Include any emotions associated with these thoughts.

Thoughts: "I messed up the presentation. I'm a complete failure and everyone thinks I'm incompetent."

Emotions: Anxiety, embarrassment, frustration.

3. Evaluate the Impact

- Reflect on how these extreme thoughts affected your emotions and behaviors.
- Did it lead to stress, anxiety, or other negative consequences?

I felt a surge of anxiety, which made it difficult to concentrate on the rest of the presentation. I stumbled over my words and lost my confidence.

4. Challenge Your Thoughts

- Examine the validity of these all-or-nothing thoughts. Is there evidence to support a more balanced perspective?
- List alternative viewpoints or considerations.

I realized that making a mistake in a presentation doesn't define my overall competence. Everyone makes errors sometimes, and it doesn't mean I'm a total failure.
