The Food Information Regulation (EU) 2011/621, which came into effect December 2014, introduces a requirement that food businesses must provide information about the allergenic ingredients used in any food they sell or provide.

There are 14 major allergens which need to be mentioned either on a label or through provided information such as a menu when they are used as ingredients in a food. Here are the allergens, and some examples of where they can be found:

Sesame Seeds:

Not used as often as food as some other allergens, but can be present in biscuits, breads, etc. because of your choice of oil or seed used in the production of the product.

Soybeans:

These have a similar chemical base, including protein, starch, etc. and are often used as a substitute for meat in meatless products. You can also find it in soufflés, in cakes, and pastries, soufflés and other products.
