strategies that are scientifically validated the scientifically validated practices included are integrated into a systematic teaching process that stresses the use of student outcome data within authentic classroom contexts to guide practice. The teaching strategies have been field tested with at risk children in both rural and urban teaching settings. Most of the strategies have resulted from work the authors did in their recent four year federally funded model demonstration grant in which they have implemented an extensive reading problem prevention model in grades K-3 in three inner city schools. Thus the teaching strategies in the book are ones that the authors implemented every day with at risk children not just findings from research articles. Features of this First Edition Include Content organized around the five components validated by the National Reading Panel phonemic awareness, phonics, fluency, vocabulary and comprehension. Readers learn how to use DIBELS and other curriculum based assessment results for early identification of children at risk of reading failure and to monitor student progress. Accompanying DVD shows teacher explicitly teaching letter sound recognition, regular word decoding, sight words, multisyllable word reading, passage reading, vocabulary and comprehension. Text explains how to use Differentiated Instruction to maximize learning for all students. Specific strategies are detailed for implementing Response To Intervention RTI multi tier instruction during the reading block. Examines building vocabulary knowledge through direct and indirect teaching strategies. Comprehension strategies identified by the National Reading Panel that help students derive meaning from text are emphasized. The Statistical Relationship Among Number Sense, Computational Fluency, and Montana Comprehensive Assessment System Amy Jo Burland, 2011 According to recent studies less than half of U.S. students perform at the proficient or advanced levels in mathematics by the time they reach grade 4 and the trend continues through high school. In order to improve instruction many districts have adopted scientifically based researched programs such as Response to Intervention RTI which allows for the examination of the effectiveness of the core curriculum that is being used in a school or classroom. In addition RTI provides school administrators and teachers with educational tools to identify students who may be at risk of failing and to inform teachers of supplemental instruction needed to build up skills that are identified as weak or lacking. Research on early mathematics skills indicates that skills performance at the kindergarten and first grade level may predict performance at later grade levels. Providing intervention early has been shown to have a positive effect on students future mathematics success. This study investigated the long term predictive validity of the AIMSweb measures for kindergarten through grade 2 and the Montana Comprehensive Assessment System MontCAS The kindergarten and grade 1 assessments included the Test of Early Numeracy which measures number sense skills that include Oral Counting Number Identification Quantity Discrimination and Missing Number The grade 1 and 2 Mathematics Curriculum Based Measures assessed computational fluency The scores on these K 2 assessments were analyzed to investigate correlations with the grade 3 MontCAS scores of the same students The results indicated that Number Identification and Quantity Discrimination provided the most explained variance Overall the kindergarten scores were stronger indicators of grade 3 performance than the grade 1 scores A sequential multiple regression model was also used to explore which of the TEN measures along with the hierarchy of tests from kindergarten through grade 2 had the greatest explained variance for the grade 3 MontCAS The results showed that each test from kindergarten to grade 1 increased the predictability of the grade 3 MontCAS scores however the grade 2 scores did not contribute to the predictability of the grade 3 assessment Overall Oral Counting indicated the highest explained variance using this model
