J. Demos, Emily Eliza Scott, Subhankar Banerjee, 2021-02-26 International in scope this volume brings together leading and emerging voices working at the intersection of contemporary art visual culture activism and climate change and addresses key questions such as why and how do art and visual culture and their ethics and values matter with regard to a world increasingly shaped by climate breakdown Foregrounding a decolonial and climate justice based approach this book joins efforts within the environmental humanities in seeking to widen considerations of climate change as it intersects with social political and cultural realms It simultaneously expands the nascent branches of ecocritical art history and visual culture and builds toward the advancement of a robust and critical interdisciplinarity appropriate to the complex entanglements of climate change This book will be of special interest to scholars and practitioners of contemporary art and visual culture environmental studies cultural geography and political ecology Environment Kenneth E. Hornback, W. Keith Warner, 1973 Pollution, Property & Prices John Harkness Dales, 2002-01-01 Dales pointed out that traditional economic and legal solutions to pollution and resource problems were never going to be satisfactory and that a third way was needed Today all environmental economists of my generation recognise the debt we owe to Dales's work as one of the intellectual foundations for emissions trading that began in California in the 1970s and now extends across the world It is a work of immense influence which deserves reprinting David Pearce University College London UK In this classic book originally published in 1968 by University of Toronto Press John Dales proposed a new policy instrument for tackling pollution problems namely markets in pollution rights Dales was one of the first economists to put forward such a solution and in subsequent years a system of emissions trading has evolved which is now a centrepiece in international discussions of how to address the problem of global climate change Essays on Energy, Equity, and the Environment in Developing Countries Debra K. Israel, 1999 The essays in this dissertation explore different environmental and public policy issues relevant to developing countries Essay I examines household level survey responses to the question How willing would you be to pay somewhat higher taxes to the government if you knew the money would be spent to protect the environment and prevent land water and air pollution Specifically for twelve developing and three developed countries included in the survey the empirical relationships among willingness to pay for environmental quality relative household income and national income are investigated The results indicate that when the effects of household and national income are combined households with below average income in low income countries are less willing to pay for environmental protection than those with above average income in high income countries Furthermore willingness to pay for environmental protection increases more significantly with relative household income than with national income Essay II uses data from urban Bolivia to study the determinants of household fuel choice

an important link between deforestation and indoor air pollution in developing countries In particular the effects of fixed fuel costs income growth and female earned income on household fuel choice are examined The results imply that reduction in firewood use in developing countries is not likely to occur simply as the result of income growth The essay discusses possible policy implications based on the results that fixed fuel costs appear to be a deterrent to switching to a cleaner fuel and households with female earned income seem less likely to use firewood than other households Essay III analyzes the equity implications of the elimination of fuel subsidies in the 1985 Bolivian economic reforms An analysis of the direct static burden shows that while the elimination of gasoline subsidies was progressively distributed the elimination of LPG and kerosene subsidies was regressive Overall the impact was close to proportional However including the indirect effect of urban transportation fare increases adds to the regressivity of the subsidy removal while including the partial equilibrium effects implies a more progressive burden
