York's Chinese in the Years of the Depression and World War II explores the role played by Chinese Americans in New York in the 1930s who laid the foundation for future generations to fight for civil rights as American citizens. The stories of Chinese Americans during the Depression years and World War II are underrepresented in the existing literature that has been confined to the early days of the settlement of Chinese Americans on the west coast of the United States. They were usually depicted as passive victims of exclusion as a result of Chinese Exclusion Laws. This book focuses on the active participation of the Chinese American in New York City in mainstream political, economic and social life that helped them to forge new identity as Chinese Americans. Their active participation in federal and local elections as a means of claiming their rights as American citizens demonstrated their growing political consciousness. Chinese New Yorkers' support of both China and United States during the war reflected their dual identity as both Chinese and Americans. Their contributions to the war front and to the home front after Pearl Harbor eventually forced the reconsideration of the Chinese Exclusion Laws. The book concludes by relating the active participation of the Chinese in New York during the war years to the national movement for racial equality that resulted in new federal civil rights legislation.

Paper Son Tung Pok Chin, Winifred C. Chin, 2000. In this remarkable memoir, Tung Pok Chin casts light on the largely hidden experience of those Chinese who immigrated to this country with false documents during the exclusion era. Although scholars have pieced together their history, first person accounts are rare and fragmented. Many of the so-called Paper Sons lived out their lives in silent fear of discovery. Chin's story speaks for the many Chinese who worked in urban laundries and restaurants, but it also introduces an unusually articulate man's perspective on becoming Chinese American. Chin's story begins in the early 1930s when he followed the example of his father and countless other Chinese who bought documents that falsely identified them as children of Chinese Americans. Arriving in Boston and later moving to New York City, he worked and lived in laundries. Chin was determined to fit into American life and dedicated himself to learning English. But he also became an active member of key organizations a church the Chinese Hand Laundrymen s Alliance and the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association that anchored him in the community A self reflective and expressive man Chin wrote poetry commenting on life in China and the hardships of being an immigrant in the United States His work was regularly published in the China Daily News and brought him to the attention of the FBI then intent on ferreting out communists and illegal immigrants His vigorous narrative speaks to the day to day anxieties of living as a Paper Son as well as the more universal immigrant experiences of raising a family in modest circumstances and bridging cultures Historian K Scott Wong introduces Chin s memoir discussing the limitations on immigration from China and what is known about Exclusion era Chinese American communities Set in historical context Tung Pok Chin s unique story offers and engaging account of a twentieth century Paper Son
