

EXTRACTING

Remove the valve cover and then take out all the bolts securing the cylinder head cover: 1 x M8x10mm bolt (A), 1 x M8x12mm bolt (B) and 1 x M10x12mm bolt (C).

Remove the head cover and then the carburettor and plug. If the operation is difficult, it should be carried out with the aid of a suitable hammer by tapping on the base on the left-hand side of the engine to help in detaching the cover from the head. If you need to inspect the valves, unscrew the valve-specific housing plugs and adjust the valves using an 8mm Allen key. The spindle from the timing case side, in this engine the cover is still fitted to the head and secured by the bolts. This is because the spindles are subjected to heating, which helps when removing the extracting tool.

Before you undertake the removal of the carburettor, refer to the water pump. This is because the carburettor needs to lock the water pump gear, which helps when removing the water pump shaft.

After you have removed the water pump cover and its retaining bolts, unscrew the bolts which retain the impeller and then the impeller itself. Then use the special tool (A) to unscrew the water pump shaft from the gear which takes its drive from the camshaft.
