Elderly Asset Management and Health Jonathan S. Feinstein, Chih-Chin Ho, 2000 We present models of asset management by the elderly. We focus on saving spend down of assets and gift giving and the influence of health on these processes. We also study the evolution of elderly health and the impact of economic variables on health outcomes. We present results from estimating our models using data from waves one and two of the AHEAD dataset. Our model of asset management links elderly decisions about saving spend down of assets and gift giving in a system of equations We divide households for which head and partner if present are in poor health and those for which head and partner are in good health our specification allows for differences in health to affect both the average level of economic outcomes and the marginal effects of income and wealth on the outcomes We also include in our model a set of sociodemographic control variables Our model of health outcomes links health in the preceding period to health in the current period allowing for three outcomes good health poor health or death In our models of health outcomes we include variables measuring health in the previous period wealth age education and control variables Our main results are the following First results for gift giving suggest that at least some elderly do plan their estate transfer those that have established trust funds or for which households assets exceed the estate tax filing threshold have a significantly greater propensity to give gifts Second the average level of gift giving is lower for those in poor health but the marginal effect of increasing wealth on gift giving is much greater This result is important in showing the ways in which health can interact with economic variables in influencing economic decision making Third income is an important determinant of saving and spend down Fourth other things equal households that save are also more likely to give gifts Fifth sudden changes in family structure and health are associated with changing patterns of economic behavior most especially becoming a widow or widower is associated with a significant increase in the likelihood both of spending out of assets and of making gifts Finally variables related to children have less effect on propensity to give gifts than expected the only variable that has a significant effect is the number of children for which parents cannot provide income information suggesting that the quality of the relationship between parents and children is important for gift giving

Greg B. Davies, Arnaud de Servigny, 2012-01-05. A Powerful New Portfolio Management Standard for an Investing World in Disarray. Three years of losses turn many smart investors with 30 year horizons into frightened investors with three year horizons driven to poor decisions by cognitive errors and misleading emotions. Greg B. Davies and Arnaud de Servigny combine great expertise from research and practice into smart portfolios that overcome cognitive errors and misleading emotions and drive investors to their long term goals. An important book which uniquely combines up to date knowledge of both behavioral and quantitative finance to provide practical models grounded on robust understanding of investors as well as investments. SHLOMO BENARTZI, professor and co-chair Behavioral Decision Making Group, UCLA Anderson School of Management. This book is both erudite and profound and it acutely addresses the issues, controversies and received wisdom of our troubled investment times. To comprehend it requires a considerable time commitment but it may be a new investment classic. BARTON M. BIGGS, Managing Partner, Traxis Partners. Behavioral Investment Management first shows how modern portfolio theory can be extended to incorporate behavioral biases in individual decision making and then demonstrates how this extended theory can be implemented to make investment decisions in a world that is very different from that assumed by traditional portfolio theory. All of this is accomplished in a coherent fashion with the use of easy to understand mathematics and is illustrated with data for a wide range of asset classes. RAMAN UPPAL, professor of finance, EDHEC Business School. About the Book. The past few years have been dreadful for investment management. The quantitative analytics that serve as the foundation of modern finance have proven to be incapable of providing value to investors. Modern Portfolio Theory now appears desperately old fashioned and obsolete for one simple reason: it does not work. Picking up where traditional quant theory leaves off, Behavioral Investment Management offers a new approach to dynamic investing that addresses critical realities. MPT ignores including investors' emotional impact on investing. Written by leading money managers with expertise in both quantitative and behavioral finance, this cutting edge guide shows institutional investment managers, retail investors and investment advisors how to use the latest theories and techniques from the field of behavioral finance to construct better performing portfolios. After systematically deconstructing MPT to illustrate why it does not work empirically, this one of a kind book presents a reasonable framework for improving your ability to generate high performing portfolios. The applicability and strategic consequences of this book's approach set a new standard for portfolio development that will put you far ahead of the industry curve. Complete with a new paradigm of best practices in dynamic portfolio construction that incorporates and compensates for the emotional reactions.
