National and State Identity in Turkey Toni Alaranta, 2015-06-09 National and State Identity in Turkey uses the concepts of national and state identity to examine Turkey s domestic and international politics and explain how the country s position in the international system has changed over the last ten years State identity is understood as the end result of a transformed national identity linking both domestic and international levels Toni Alaranta argues that there has been a radical reformulation of Turkey's national identity interest and positioning in the world since the Justice and Development Party AKP came to power in 2002 This transformed identity has helped the country renegotiate its status in the world He first examines the changing nature of Turkey's national identity before looking at the struggle between two extreme positions secularism and Islamism He then explains how the New Turkey discourse is part of an Islamic conservative ideology that targets the notion of the domestic other or minorities versus the Turkish Muslim self This discourse is transforming not only the notion of national identity but also Turkey's relations with the rest of the world and particularly with the European Union
