During the 1990s, the Chinese government made a concerted effort to increase its influence in the region. It did so by supporting the development of the Chinese language and culture, and by investing in infrastructure and economic development. This has led to a significant increase in Chinese influence in the region, particularly in the areas of trade, investment, and tourism. The Chinese government has also sought to increase its influence through diplomatic means, such as through the Belt and Road Initiative, which aims to connect China to the rest of the world through a network of infrastructure projects.

Consequently, the study of the effects of the environment on the development of the brain and the nervous system is of great interest. The present study, which is the first to examine the effects of the environment on the development of the brain and the nervous system in the rat, has shown that the environment can have a significant influence on the development of the brain and the nervous system.
