and future trends

Dr. James McPherson is the Executive Director of the National Center for Children, Youth, & Families, a research and policy organization at the University of Maryland.

As the nation's largest and oldest child abuse prevention organization, the National Center for Child Abuse and Neglect (NCCAN) has been a leading voice in the field of child abuse and neglect for over 30 years. NCCAN's mission is to prevent child abuse and neglect, and to provide support and resources for children and families who have been affected by these issues. NCCAN's work is based on the understanding that child abuse and neglect are preventable, and that the best way to prevent these issues is through education, research, and advocacy.

One of the most important aspects of NCCAN's work is its research. NCCAN has conducted numerous studies on child abuse and neglect, and has published the results of these studies in a variety of formats, including reports, articles, and books. NCCAN's research has helped to identify the causes of child abuse and neglect, and has provided valuable information for the development of prevention and intervention programs.

In addition to its research, NCCAN also provides a wide range of services to children and families who have been affected by child abuse and neglect. These services include counseling, support groups, and referrals to other resources. NCCAN's goal is to provide the best possible support and resources to children and families who are in need.

NCCAN's work is supported by a variety of sources, including the federal government, state governments, and private foundations. NCCAN is grateful for the support of these organizations, and is committed to continuing its work to prevent child abuse and neglect, and to provide support and resources to children and families who have been affected by these issues.

NCCAN's website, www.nccan.org, provides a wealth of information about child abuse and neglect, including statistics, research, and resources. NCCAN's website is a valuable resource for anyone who is interested in child abuse and neglect, and is a key part of NCCAN's commitment to providing information and resources to the public.
