Teaching for Active Citizenship Joanne Lunn Brownlee,Eva Johansson,Susan Walker,Laura Scholes,2016-06-17 There is strong social and political interest in active citizenship and values in education internationally Active citizenship requires children to experience and internalize moral values for human rights developing their own opinions and moral responsibility While investment in young children is recognised as an important factor in the development of citizenship for a cohesive society less is known about how early years teachers can encourage this in the classroom This book will present new directions on how teachers can promote children's learning of moral values for citizenship in classrooms. The research provided offers important insights into teaching for active citizenship by providing an analysis of educational contexts for moral values for active citizenship highlighting teachers' beliefs about knowing and knowledge personal epistemologies and how these relate to children's learning and understanding about social and moral values discussing the impact of teachers' beliefs on teaching practices. Evidence suggests that investment in the early years is vital for all learning and specifically for developing an understanding of active citizenship for tolerant and cohesive societies. This book will be essential reading for the professional education of early years teachers interested in teaching for active citizenship.

Promoting Active Citizenship Karl Henrik Sivesind, Jo Saglie, 2017-08-29. This book is open access under a CC BY 4.0 license. This book analyses the considerable variation in the shares of private provision for core services in education, health and social services in the Scandinavian countries. The chapters compare countries' service areas and the for profit, non profit and public sectors. Each focuses on different levels of change: the mix of welfare providers, national laws and regulations, governance in municipalities, nursing homes and schools and finally the consequences experienced by the users of the services. The authors ask which combinations of governance structures, service sector providers and user choice give the best results for active citizenship. Promoting Active Citizenship will be of interest to students and scholars across a range of disciplines including Public Administration and Management, Non Profit Management, Social Policy, Innovation in Public Service, Social Care and Education and School Research.

Young People and Active Citizenship in Post-Soviet Times Beata Krzywosz-Rynkiewicz, Anna Zalewska, Kerry J. Kennedy, 2017-08-10. Situated within the context of post soviet times this book explores young people's citizenship activities and values in three distinct environments: post soviet union countries, post soviet union satellites and countries that were independent of the soviet union. Its purpose is to investigate the influence of these contexts on the ways young people see their citizenship in what are now emerging democracies. The future of nations depends to a large extent on whether citizens will continue to support existing values and will engage in activities to support those values. Using a framework designed by Kennedy 2006 and further developed by Zalewska Krzywosz Rynkiewicz 2011 the study examined the citizenship values of 3794 students aged 11-14-18 from 11 European countries. The main themes of this book include exploring similarities and differences in citizenship activities within countries and across countries, advancing explanations for these similarities and differences, highlighting the importance of contexts that influence citizenship activities and values and assessing the extent to which democratic values are reflected in young people's citizenship activities.
