

A Modern Modest Proposal: Homelessness

I am constantly walking around seeing dirty bodies just sprawled out on the ground. There has been homeless people on the streets for years upon years now and people, including me, are now beginning to wonder why these people can not just get a job. If these homeless people got jobs, it would solve the problem of homelessness. They are sitting around collecting money for what?

All they need for a job is to tidy themselves up, a nice suit, and a good first impression. They will also need a few minor things like a home address, a phone number in case of emergency, and last a way of getting to this specific job one may have. It is not that hard.

This laziness of homeless people and them not being able to get a job is getting old. I have reached a solution to this extensive laziness. First of all, most homeless people wake up and spend their days on quests to find any piece of nutritional value or at least something of sentimental value through trash cans and dumpsters.

If they are not on these hunts they are begging for spare change on street corners or in alleys after people leave a restaurant. They are bombarding people for all this money, and many give in to it. So how are these people still Homeless? One may say that begging for a few dollars is not going to give them a life, but I for one know it could get them a job to then make a living. I also begin to think that they should be able to afford a few decent suits or other clothing items to wear while applying and even working for this job of theirs. The only thing they have to do is just stay out a little longer and beg a bit harder and they would have money from a job in no time.

Now, you also may think maintaining these articles of clothing clean would be difficult, but it is manageable. If the homeless person can not afford a coin operated laundromat, which I am sure they could with all of the change they collect from begging, they can just find a large puddle of water in the street to wash their things in.

When it comes to their hygiene and cleanliness, that is not a problem to get those resources. Everybody throws away their left over deodorant or antiperspirant, soap, and other such toiletries to where you can take care of the bathing problem. As for the homeless person's hair, they will not have to worry about this because resources say you should not wash your hair often. When you wash your hair everyday you strip it of its natural oils.

When this happens, your scalp starts to produce more oil and therefore making your hair become more greasy faster. With that being said, clean hair is the least of our worries for these people.

Continuing, with all of the left over money they have, they should go to one of those mailbox stores and buy themselves a mailing address or just use somebody else's! The only thing they would have to deal with is the eating situation. They will have to find food in the dumpsters or maybe the crumbs.

Managing Mass Education, and the Rise of Modern and Financial Management Ian Waitt,2023-09-01 This book skilfully intertwines three main themes in the growth and expression of management The essential component to understanding of context is established through a stark exposition of the conditions of society in the 18th and 19th centuries From these is drawn the until now unrecognised precursor of major change the establishment of mass education This was achieved through the wayward genius of the charismatic teacher Joseph Lancaster who despite his struggles with the Church and his own foibles was able through his attractively cheap plan and dominant guiding idea to bring mass education to Britain then Europe the USA the Americas and much of the world enabling the institution of the first and second industrial revolutions This occurred in parallel with the remarkable growth of what was to become modern and financial management The practical case studies also included in the text usefully highlight the merits and demerits of major societal transformations An invaluable and essential contribution to the creation of a new paradigm for Management Studies this important exposition with its emphasis on the human element and experience is relevant to all students teachers and practitioners of management from school college and university levels to the postgraduate and experienced management practitioner

Literature as Dialogue Roger D. Sell,2014-08-15 How is it that some texts achieve the status of literature

Partly at least because the relationships they allow between their writers and the people who respond to them is fundamentally egalitarian. This is the insight explored by members of the bo literary communication network who in this new book develop fresh approaches to literary works of widely varied provenance. The authors examined have written in Ancient Greek, T'ng, Chinese, Middle, Modern and Contemporary English, German, Romanian, Polish, Russian and Hebrew. But each and every one of them is shown as having offered their human fellows something which despite some striking appearances to the contrary amounts to a welcoming invitation. This their audiences have then been able to negotiate in a spirit of dialogical interchange. Part I of the book poses the question How in offering their invitation have writers respected their audiences' human autonomy? This is the province of what bo scholars call communication criticism. Part II asks how an audience negotiating a literary invitation can be encouraged to respect the human autonomy of the writer who has offered it. In bo parlance such encouragement is the task of mediating criticism. These two modes of criticism naturally complement each other and in their shared concern for communication ethics ultimately seek to further a post postmodern world that would be global without being hegemonic.

Eighteenth-century Ireland, 2007 Order from Confusion Sprung Claude Rawson, 2018-10-03. Originally published in 1985. Order From Confusion Sprung brings together some of Claude Rawson's more important essays and articles on eighteenth century subjects most belong to the last decade or so but a few earlier pieces have also been included. Swift, Pope and Fielding are extensively treated and there are discussions of Johnson, Boswell, Cowper as well as some authors of the so called Sentimental School. The volume also contains reappraisals of the concepts underlying such terms as neo classic and Augustan in their application to eighteenth century literature and comments forthrightly on prevailing trends in the academic study of the subject in the last two decades.

Spanning Japan's Modern Century Hugh Borton, 2002-01-01. In 1942 Hugh Borton, then a 39 year old assistant professor of Japanese history, was called to serve in the State Department. Here he rose rapidly to become one of the principal architects of United States policy toward post war Japan. Drawn from Borton's personal papers, this work provides a fresh and intimate picture of the man who played a pivotal role in defining the meaning of unconditional surrender for Japan, retaining the Emperor and designing Japan's post war constitution. It sheds fascinating new light on the development of the United States post war Japanese policy and the often fractious relationships between the various agencies tasked with its creation and implementation. The author of Japan's Modern Century, director of Columbia University's East Asian Institute and later president of the Association for Asian Studies, Hugh Borton dedicated his life to strengthening the academic, cultural and humanitarian ties between Japan and the United States.
