

Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary

Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary is a 340-square-mile area of the Pacific Ocean off the central coast of California. The sanctuary is home to a wide variety of marine life, including the world's largest kelp forest, and is a major center for marine research and education. The sanctuary is managed by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and the Monterey Bay National Marine Science Center (MBNMSC).

The sanctuary is a unique and valuable resource for the state of California and the nation. It provides a natural laboratory for studying marine ecosystems and the effects of human activities on the ocean. The sanctuary also provides a source of food and recreation for the people of the state and the nation.

The sanctuary is a testament to the power of science and the importance of protecting our natural resources. It is a place where we can learn about the ocean and its many mysteries, and where we can enjoy the beauty and wonder of the natural world.
